

And let aside thy thoughts that are heavy unto thee, and let thee to slee in these times.

16 For yet greater will then those which thou hast seen happen, shall be done hereafter.

17 How look thou much the world shall be we shall there 18 loafin vision 19

said,

20 Behold, Lord, I will go as thou hast commanded me, and reprove the people which are present, but they that shall be born afterward, who shall admonish them that the world is set in darknesse, and they that dwell therein are without light.

21 For thy Law is burnt, therefore no man knoweth the things that are done of thee, or the works that shall begin.

22 But if I have found grace before thee, send the holy Ghost into me, and I shall write all that hath been done in the world since the beginning, which were written in thy Law, that men may finde thy path, and that they which will live in the latter dayes, may live.

23 And he answered me, saying, Go thy way, gather the people together, and say unto them, that they seek thee not for fourty dayes.

24 But look thou, prepare thee many box-trees, and take with thee, Sarea, Dabria, Selenium, Ecanus, and Asiel, these five which are ready to write swiftly.

25 And come hither, and I shall light a candle of understanding in thine heart, which shall not be put out, till the things be performed, which thou shalt begin to write.

26 And when thou hast done some things shalt thou publish, and some things shalt thou shew secretly to the wife: to morrow this hour shalt thou begin to write.

27 Then went I forth as he commanded,
and gathered all the people together, and
said,

28 Hear the words, O Israel,

29 Our fathers at the beginning were strangers in Egypt, from whence they were delivered:

30 And received the Law of life which they kept not, which ye also have transgres-

31 Then went the land, even the land of Sion, parted long you by lot, but your fathers, and your selves have done unrighteousness, and have not kept the wayes which the Lord commanded you.

32 And I said, as ye is a righteous

33 And now you here, and your thren amongst you

34 Therefore I be that you will for-due your own understanding, and refo-your hearts, ye shall kept alive, and after death ye shall obtaine life.

35 For after death all the judgement come. when we shall begin, and then

From the library of

SIR R. LEICESTER HARMSWORTH, BART.

remained there.

38 And the next day, hold, a voice called me, saying, Esdras open thy mouth, and drink that I give thee drink.

39 Then opened I my mouth, and behold, he reached me a cup, which was full as it were with water but the colour of it was like fire.

40 And I took it, and drank: and when I had drunk of it, my heart was understanding, and wisdom grew my breast, for my spirit strengthened my memory.

41 And my mouth was eased, and I had no more.

42 The Highest gave understanding unto the five men, and they wrote the wonder-full visions of the night, as were told, which they knew not: And by fate forty dayes, and they wrote in tityday, and at night they ate bread:

43 As for me, I spake in the day, and held not my tongue by night:

44 In forty dayes they wrote two hundred and four books.

45 And it came to passe when the forty dayes were fulfilled, that the Highest spake, saying, The first that thou hast written, publish openly, that the worthy and unworthy may read it.

46 But keep the seventy last, that thou mayest deliver them only to such as be wise among the people.

47 For in them is the spring of understanding, the fountains of wisdom, and the stream of knowledge.

48 And I did so.

CHAP. XV.

Behold, speak thou in the ears of my people the words of prophesie which I will put in thy mouth, saith the Lord.

1 And cause them to be written in paper: for they are faithfull and true.

2 Fear not the imaginations against thee, let not the incredulity of them trouble thee that speak against thee.

3 For all the unfaithfull shall die in their unfaithfulness.

4 Behold, saith the Lord; I will bring plagues

And let aside thy thoughts that are
heavy unto thee, and let thee to slee
in these times.

16 For yet greater will then those
which thou hast seen happen, shall be done
hereafter.

17 How look thou much the world shall

be we shall there 18 leafin
vision 19
said,

20 Behold, Lord, I will go as thou hast
commanded me, and reprove the people
which are present, but they that shall be
born afterward, who shall admonish them
that the world is set in darknesse, and they
that dwell therein are without light.

21 For thy Law is burnt, therefore no
man knoweth the things that are done of
thee, or the works that shall begin.

22 But if I have found grace before
thee, send the holy Ghost into me, and I
shall write all that hath been done in the
world since the beginning, which were written in thy Law, that men may finde thy path,
and that they which will live in the latter
dayes, may live.

23 And he answered me, saying, Go thy
way, gather the people together, and say
unto them, that they seek thee not for
fourty dayes.

24 But look thou, prepare thee many
box-trees, and take with thee, Sarea, Dabria, Selenium, Ecanus, and Asiel, these five which
are ready to write swiftly.

25 And come hither, and I shall light a candle of understanding in thine heart,
which shall not be put out, till the things
be performed, which thou shalt begin to write.

26 And when thou hast done some things
shalt thou publish, and some things shalt
thou shew secretly to the wife: to morrow
this hour shalt thou begin to write.

27 Then went I forth as he commanded,
and gathered all the people together, and
said,

28 Hear the words, O Israel,

29 Our fathers at the beginning were
strangers in Egypt, from whence they were delivered:

30 And received the Law of life which
they kept not, which ye also have transgres-

31 Then went I into the land, even the land of Sion, parted along you by lot, but your fathers, and your selves have done un-
righteousness, and have not kept the wayes
which the Lord commanded you.

32 And I saw that ye in a righteous

33 And now you here, and your
thren amongst you.

34 Therefore I be that you will for-due your own understanding, and reform your hearts, ye shall be kept alive, and after death ye shall obtaine life.

35 For after death all the judgement
come. when we shall begin, and then

From the library of

SIR R. LEICESTER HARMSWORTH, BART.

remained there.

38 And the next day, hold, a voice
called me, saying, Esdras open thy mouth,
and drink that I give thee drink.

39 Then opened I my mouth, and be-
hold, he reached me a cup, which was
full as it were with water but the colour
of it was like fire.

40 And I took it, and drank: and when I had drunk of it, my heart was under-
standing, and wisdom grew my breast, for
my spirit strengthened my memory.

41 And my mouth was eased, and I had no more.

42 The Highest gave understanding unto
the five men, and they wrote the wonder-
full visions of the night, as were told,
which they knew not: And by fate forty
dayes, and they wrote in tityday, and at night they ate bread:

43 As for me, I spake in the day, and held
not my tongue by night:

44 In forty dayes they wrote two hundred and four books.

45 And it came to passe when the forty
dayes were fulfilled, that the Highest spake,
saying, The first that thou hast written,
publish openly, that the worthy and unworthy may read it.

46 But keep the seventy last, that thou
mayest deliver them only to such as be wise
among the people.

47 For in them is the spring of under-
standing, the fountains of wisdom, and the stream of knowledge.

48 And I did so.

CHAP. XV.

Behold, speak thou in the ears of my
people the words of prophesie which I will put in thy mouth, saith the Lord.

1 And cause them to be written in paper: for they are faithfull and true.

2 Fear not the imaginations against thee,
let not the incredulity of them trouble thee
that speak against thee.

3 For all the unfaithfull shall die in
their unfaithfulness.

4 Behold, saith the Lord; I will bring
plagues

E. H. Barker

162 Il Davide Perseguitato

DAVID

persecuted.

Written in Italian

By

The Marques Virgilio
Malvezzi:

And done into English

By

ROBERT ASHLEY Gentleman.

LONDON,

Printed by John Haviland for Thomas Knight, and are to be sold by Thomas Alcorn, at the green Dragon in S. Pauls Church-yard, 1637.

DAVID

persecuted

Written in Italian

by

The Marquis Nigro

Genoa

And done into English

by

Robert Aske, Esq.

LONDON

Printed by J. W. H. and J. T. H. for Thomas K. and are sold by J. T. H. in the Strand at the Sign of the

DAVID

Persecuted.

TH³EY that make a question whether it be true or no that God speakes any more to men, or indeed that men have any more intelligence from God; let them beleeve it for a certaine that hee speakes, but they are too deafe to heare the language; let them beleeve it for certaine that hee writes, but they are too blinde to perceiue the Character: Hee that will understand his voyce, A hee

2 DAVID persecute d.

hee that will read his letter, let him betake himselfe to the Holy writ, that is a Vocabulary, which the Spirit of God hath left us to explaine his profound discourses by, that is a key to disclose all those obscure letters that are directed to us from heaven.

Will you, O Princes, will you, O people, conceive what it is that God speakes when hee sends a pestilence, when hee sends a famine, when hee sends warre, when hee brings estates to destruction, or in hazard to be destroyed? Goe runne over these names in the Vocabulary of the Almighty.

But the weake and weary eyes of our mind eschew the light of the truth, they precipitate themselves into an abyfle of miseries, and

DAVID persecuted. 3

and among the obscurities of the night grope for the splendour of the sunne : Thus wee renounce the prerogatives of the new law.

It is not the way to get forth of the Clouds in which the Israelites walked, for men, but to change them. Those divine mysteries which they beheld only clouded up in darknesse, are now most transparently observed in a cleare skie ; yet the causes of the Revolutions of States, of the increase of one, of the diminution of another, of the fall of Princes, of Famine, of Pestilence, of Warre, were openly displayed to them, and wee on the contrary envelop them in the obscuritie of a thousand ambiguities, as if that were not true which the greatest Divines have told us, that the Chastisements which came upon the Israelites befell them for our example.

4. DAVID persecuted.

God speaketh but once (saith Iob) and speaketh not againe : the holy writ is that booke in which hee hath spoken : there then ought to be searched the causes of good or bad events, where clearly and for our sakes they are written.

To frame Politicke aphorismes, to set downe rules for it taken from prophane authors, is in a manner to pretend that mans will is necessarie and conducting.

Nay I could find in my heart to say that it is an undeifying of God, and a deifying of the second causes : He makes them serve his turne, but them hee serves serves not. Hee that in discussing upon naturall events brings in God only for a reason, is but a poore Philosopher; and hee that brings him not in, in Inquiries of Politick occurrences, is but a poore Christian; when it is his pleasure that the fire which at one time scorched should at another coole, hee must have recourse to his almighty power in working miracles, but hee may very well without miracles give way, that the same action which at one time hath reared up a Prince, should at another sink him.

DAVID persecuted. 5

Vid. Dan.

Our too leaden wings cannot eagle us up from this base earth, wee walke in a gloomy aire, without lifting up our eyes to that most glorious

A 3 Sunne

6 DAVID persecuted.

Sunne of the Empireum.

The Politick treatises of the Gentiles which are but earthly, bring us back to earth, in that they have in them but earthly causes, but the holy instructions which are sent us from heaven producing heavenly causes, bring us home to heaven. O most benigne Lord, may it please thee to give to drink of thy most cleare and living water, this thirsty wretch who forsakes the stinking and muddy Cisternes of the Gentiles, rather loathing them than satisfied with them.

If I knew not my selfe unworthy to bee taken out of the darknesse of my grosse ignorance, I would most humbly and upon my knees intreat thee for one ray which like the dawning

DAVID persecuted. 7

ning leading mee on to the most cleare Noone, might at this present in some part draw mee out of the obscuritie of this dimme night, that I might discover those deepe and profound mysteries which are concealed from the feebleness of our understandings.

The Prophet Samuel reproves Saul, because that contrarie to Gods commandement, hee had left Agag King of the Amalekites alive, and had not slaine all his cattell.

THe disobedience of Saul gives the last turne to the wheele of his greatnesse : It is a fire which consumeth crowns, for they are soldred with obedience. He knoweth not what belongs to matter of state that loseth this towards God : hee teacheth others to forgoe it toward their superiours, and as much as in him lyes, destroyes the compacture of the universe.

8 DAVID persecuted.

Disobedience is the offspring either of the arrogance of the braine, or of the weaknesse of the senses ; either that men thinke to doe better than they are commanded, or that they are inclined to doe worse ; In one of these the frailtie sometimes meets with compassion, in the other the contempt alwaies provokes to vengeance : This can never bee in regard of God, because it is not possible to bee wiser than God,
and

DAVID persecuted. 9

and when it is practised among men, although it may often seeme to produce good fruit, yet is it alwayes naught, as that which proceeds from an evill plant. Well ordered Common-wealths have not forborne to punish it, though prosperous victories ill disciplined bringing with them more damage than defeatments doe.

Saul excuses himselfe in that the people had preserved the best of the spoile to sacrifice them to God :
Obedience is better than Sacrifice (answers Samuel.)

God had already ordained the Sacrifice when he had

A. 5 com.

IO DAVID persecuted.

commanded that all the men, and all the Cattell of the Amalekites should be slaine; so many Priests they were, that were appointed to kill them, so many sacrifices as to bee killed.

There want not this day such Sauls, that sacrifice to God the sacrifices of disobedience. These golden moun-taines heaped up with impiety that seemes sometimes to a-dorne them, defile the altars of God, they onely garnish the ambition of man: Hee that thinks with these to pacifie his divine Majestie, incenseth it: as much as in him lyes, with execrable blasphemie proclaimes that Majestie to bee most wicked, and makes him partaker of his misdeeds, as if hee were bound to bee appeased

DAVID persecuted. 11

sed with him, so hee may but have a share in the purchases of his villanies.

The Prophet replies, Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, the Lord hath rejected thee from being King. Saul sayes to him, I have sinned, return with mee that I may worship the Lord.

See the power of ambition, which hath oftentimes more force upon the hearts of men than the Commandments of God have : He makes as if he repented, because hee feares to lose the Kingdome : Hee repents not because hee cares

12 DAVID persecuted.

cares not for losing Heaven But (Oh the deceivable judgements of men) because hee repents not, hee loseth the kingdome of Heaven ; when happily had hee repented, hee had lost neither the kingdome nor heaven.

Hee that will learne the best art for preserving of states, let him read the decalogue, he shall find there in ten lines dictated by the holy Ghost, those directions that are the most assured for the achieving of heaven, and the least deceitfull for soveraigntie upon earth: Policie is a Sea so inconstant, so turbulent, that there is no place so bee found in it where wee have not seene one Prince or other cast away, it is a peece of Architecure so decayed, that it always

DAVID persecuted. 13

alwayes threatneth to fall downe, that to keepe the frame of the world upon its basis, God, that heaven and earth may not be confounded, permits it still to bee tottering, yet sometimes under those that observe his owne precepts.

Samuel offers to depart; Saul takes him by the skirt of his garment and teares it : Even so shall the kingdome of Israel bee rent from thee, addeth the Prophet.

DOe not (Oh yee Princes) spoil your subjects; Let the vestments of the Priests be sacred in your eyes : Hee that spoilth

14 DAVID persecuted!

Spoileth the subject is not a Prince ; hee is a Tyrant : hee loseth the name if hee lose not the estate.

God hath many times made garments expresse his intentions , peradventure because they are in some sort a part of our selves while they are united to us. The spirits which continually exhale out of our bodies, are those that cause this union.

The Coats of beasts are very certaine signes of their nature, as the Garments of men are of their conceit, for as that apparels the one kind, so the other doth the other. Every Countrie hath its difference of Garment because each hath its difference of conceit, which hath not a cloathing of her owne, hath

DAVID persecuted. 15

hath not a Prince of her owne :
Against such a one peradventure one of the Prophets exclaimed in threatening termes when hee said, Woe be to you which goe clad in strange garments : It may goe for a kind of a sure token, that if they have not a stranger to their Sovereigne, they would have one. A horses coat shewes his constitution, and a mans his inclination.

Saul answereth that he hath sinned, yet prayes the Prophet againe to returne with him to the sacrifice, and to honour him before the Elders of the people.

TO leape from Religion to Hypocrisie, to offend
and

16 DAVID persecuted.

and therewith to defend himselfe, is not to serve God, but to make God serve his turne, and when one cannot deceive him, to deceive others by him. The cause of so great an impietie is that execrable proposition never enough deplored, That tis all one, to bee good, and to seeme good. This may bee true in regard of men whose knowledge is but opinion.

No sooner was Saul made acquainted with the will of God, but hee seeks how to hinder it ; no sooner leaves hee to bee religious, but hee becomes a Politician ; as if the cunning of state which is not sufficient to defend us against men, were able to defend us against God.

The certaine knowledge that a Prince is to lose his estate, raises

DAVID persecuted. 17

raises up many to looke after it. There is no fearing of him whose fortunes the heavens oppose, and men are very gladly instruments of Gods anger. If men were among us as zealous to remunerate the good as they are to chastise the bad, and rewards were equall to punishments, peradventure the world would bee better than it is : but because punishment many times is accompanied with profit, and Reward with some losse, men are more inclined to punish than to reward : And it is very convenient that in this world the Chastisements should be greater than the Rewards, to make us know that in the other the Rewards shall be greater than the Chastisements.

Samuel

18 DAVID persecuted.

Samuel had said that hee would not returne, yet hee returneth afterward, though not to sacrifice with Saul, yet to sacrifice Agag, not as Minister of Hypocrisie, or of Policie, but of Religion: Hee causes Agag to be brought before him, that he might slay him. Hee considers in him the Image of a Tyrant waxen fat with the blood and substance of his subjects, and trembling at the anger of God. The Prophet saith unto him; As thy sword hath made

DAVID persecuted. 19
made many women childlesse, so shall thy mother be made childlesse among women, and so hee killeth him.

K Now you why the Lord said, Hee that striketh with the sword, shall perish with the sword? To adde force to the law of nature, that saith, Doe not that to another which thou wouldst not have done to thee: but little would this, if God had not added; for that which thou dost to another shall be done to thee: the one doth instruct, and the other terrifie us. If God should not sometimes punish sins in this world, they would not beleeeve that there is a God; if he should alwaies punish sins in

20 DAVID persecuted.

in this world, men would think there were no other world for them but this.

Samuel departeth to Ramah, and there mourneth for Saul, because God repenteth that hee had made him King.

PRinces may well thinke it is no shame to remove those from their charge, that carry themselves shamefully therein: yet need they not regard that false rule of policy, that to change their Ministers before their time is to submit themselves to their subjects, to accustome them to dislike of their Governours, and a prejudiciall thing to their dominion
in

DAVID persecuted. 21

in permitting them not to have the election, yet at least the approbation of his Ministers, who may thereby bee more apt to prefer the appetite of the people, before the service of the Prince. The malignitie of men hath mistaken the termes, this is not to give way to the people, 'tis but to give them eare. It is no losse of authoritie, but a purchase, and it shall never accustom the subjects to complain of such officers which deserve well, to take away those who deserve ill.

Man who is moulded of base matter attributeth to himselfe more oftentimes than to God; who though hee can never repent, yet having chosen a Minister who turneth to evill, doth speake and worke as if hee re-pen-

22 DAVID persecuted.

penteth. And man who on many occasions to repent, either repenteth not at all, or else proceeds, as if he had not repented.

The lamentations of Samuel appease not God, and why should his weepings appease him for Saul, when Saul himselfe weepes not?

How oft doth the righteous offer sacrifice for the sinner, whiles the sinner himselfe is sacrificing to the Devill? whiles the one labours to appease God, the other provoketh him farther. It might seeme unto God that the righteous intercessor were a liar in craving pardon for him that refuseth it, if God did not know that the finer

DAVID persecuted. 23

finner is like to a mad man, who oft hath need of one of understanding to speake to the Physician for him.

God in some sort complaines against Samuel, when he saith, How long wilt thou mourne for Saul? God could not (if one may say so) endure his lamenting, and not hearken to his suit. These are those waters which in a manner offer violence to Heaven; The Spirit of God moveth upon such waters, and they make a river of oblivion in Paradise. The tears which are shed, the prayers which are said, and the supplications which are sent up to God for others, are as acceptable to God, and more peradventure than if they were made for themselves: They are esteemed of more

24 DAVID persecuted.

more merit, at least in regard of the moralitie of the action. Why then doe some Princes perswade themselves, that they satisfie the obligation wherein they are obliged to some one, when they yeeld him his suit which hee hath made for another? Or to say more truly, why doe some favourites beleeve that there is such an impiety in their Princes? Let them call to minde that the office of a favourite is the office of an Angell, and ought therefore to present the suits and supplications of the subjects to their Lord, and to bring backe the gracious grants of the Lord unto the subjects; he that doth the contrary is a Divell, and no Angell.

Fill

DAVID persecuted. 25

Fill thy horne with oyle (saith God to the Prophet) and goe to Ishai the Bethleemite, for amongst his sonnes I have provided mee a King: Hee answers, How can I goe, for if Saul heare of it, he will kill me.

THUS he answereth, not because he feareth death, but because hee is desirous to doe service unto God; he much prizes his life in that case wherein to die is not to obey: Hence let those that are employed by their Princes learne that the death of the servant is seldome the service of the Lord. It

B ought

26 DAVID persecuted.

ought indeed to bee received couragiously, but never to bee encountred but when it is very usefull, and when the dying is an obeying. A man of worth is a high prized instrument of the greatnesse of his Prince, if hee cares not to preserve himselfe for his owne sake, yet hee ought to be careful of preservation for his Lord and Masters sake. Every man that is fitted to die is not fit to doe service.
It is true also what I have said even in the common Souldier, (whose life rather than his brain is dedicated to the Princes service) that he ought also to endevour to obey, and not to die.
Hee that runnes headlong on death, doth not spend his life to the advantage, but casts it away to the losse of his Lord, his service

DAVID persecuted. 27

vice is to overcome, and not to die, and indeed they lose that are slaine. To expose needlessly to death that body which can doe service to its Prince, but whiles it lives, is a most pernicious desire of vaine glory, contrary to good policy, against good military discipline, and an affection full of deceit and flattery; into which even the Generals whose life is most precious, doe often precipitate themselves, as if it were a greater bravery to fight than to command. But that Army is but in a bad taking (pardon me this digression) whose safety consisteth in the arme, not in the braine of the Generall. To know how to command well in warre, is a part of the imaginative faculty. The imagination

28 DAVID persecuted.

to worke well requireth a good measure of heat, whose contrary is feare, which how little so ever it bee, the other abates, and how little so ever that abates, the imagination is disturbed; whence it comes to passe that to bee afraid and to command well cannot stand together: But how many are there that incited more by Honour than by Courage, do both fight and feare? these may handle the sword well, but yet not apt for command. The heating of the braine is not in our owne power, as is the managing of the hands: wee have no command over that, howsoever absolute dominion we have over this other; for otherwise cowardize were not blame worthy if it were of nature necessarily rily in us. Thence it followes that there is no greater or surer signe of a brave courage than to command well in a battell; where both Reputation and life, yea, and many times the State it selfe comes upon the stage.

DAVID persecuted. 29

The Lord willeth Samuel to take him a calfe out of the flock, and to say that hee is come to doe sacrifice.

BEcause God could succour him by ordinarie meanes, hee would not have recourse to extraordinary. If hee should alwayes bee doing of miracles, men would not thinke his Providence so great in creating the second causes; and if hee never used miracles, hee should not perhaps be knowne to bee Almighty. Where God worketh many miracles, there is commonly great need of them; and where there is such need, there is but little faith. When hee is not knowne by his Impression, stamp, or Image, which hee hath imprinted in the things by him created, then he findeth it requisite to make himselfe seene in the workes of his Omnipotencie.

30 DAVID persecuted.

Samuel obeyeth the Lord, goeth and calleth Ishai and his sonnes to the sacrifice, and looking on Eliab supposeth him to bee the man

DAVID persecuted. 3.
man whom hee should annoynt, because hee is the tallest and the goodliest of person.

Had the Prophet beene of the opinion of those Philosophers, who have censured men of great stature to bee void of wisdom, hee would not at the first sight so much have respected the tallnesse of stature. I for my part am not of that opinion, but doe hold it to bee most false.

IF those Philosophers beleev-ed the neerenesse of the braine to the stomack, doth trouble the operations of the understanding, and if they have also imagined to themselves,

B 4 that

32 DAVID persecuted.

that the vitall spirits which ascend from the heart, may bee made animall spirits, for the service and operation of the Braine are unapt for such effect, unlesse they bee first somewhat cooled (because of the incompatibilitie of wisdom with heat) wherefore have they not also affirmed the taller sort of men to be wiser than the little, as having their Braine farther distant from the perturbations of the stomack, and their spirits not so hot by reason of their long way, and larger distance from their Originall? Peradventure they are deceived, in that they beleeve that men are alwayes great by the forming Power, through the superabundance of matter, not observing that many times there concurr reth

DAVID persecuted. 33

reth with it as a principall Instrument the Quantitie of heat, as it is commonly verified in those whose tallnesse is accompanied with slendernesse. It hath therefore been noted as a true observation, that the tall men that have little heads, and the little men which have great, have more Braine than the rest, which commeth to passe not as many have thought, because the little head in the great body, and the great in the little maketh a mediocrity in the ordinarie stature of men; which is false if wee measure the mediocritie of the part in respect of the whole of which it is a part: But because the little head in a great man, is a signe that the extension did proceed of heat, and by consequence that the littlenesse of that member commeth through defect of matter in the bony and fleshy parts, which being but small, produceth the thinner and more delicate Organs which do not obstruct, or hinder the operations of the braine. The little man having a great head, is an argument that it is full of braine, especially if he bee but slender, for it cannot be ascribed to the thicknesse of the skull, because that Nature would rather have imployed that matter to have made the man taller or greater. I am excusable if I seeke by reason to overthrow this doctrine, because I am willing to verifie it by the example of mine owne stature.

34 DAVID persecuted.

The

DAVID persecuted. 35

The Lord willeth Samuel not to regard the countenance of Eliab, nor the talnesse of his stature, but hee had refused him, judging not as men doe by the outward appearance, but beholding the Heart.

LOe here the vanitie of Metoposcopie and Physiognomie is pointed at. Beauty or Comlinesse is a most perfect consonancie arising out of the symmetrie and proportion of the first Qualities: It gets in the eye because it is faire; It attracts the will because it is good, it moves the vnderstanding because it is true. The Poets in the vanity of their fables have

36. DAVID persecuted.

have haply come neere vnto the truth calling beautie by the name of the Sun, of the Stars, & of Heaven: It is certainly a peece of that Harmony which the motions and aspects of the Heavens, of the Sun, and of the starres doe incite, and hath such a radiant light in it selfe, that (though wee know not why) it doth if not inforce our minds, yet certainly incline them strongly. The Providence of God hath seldome informed the fairest body with the fairest mind, that men might not beleeeve, that from the same Harmony of temperament of the starres, from which proceeds the Beautie of the one, that of the other did proceed likewise.

DAVID persecuted. 37

Ishai having finally brought forth his sonnes before Samuel to the number of seven, hee refusing them all, asketh whether he hath no more : Ishai answering, there is yet one which is feeding of the sheepe, the Prophet causeth him to be sent for, and annointeth him in the midst of his Brethren, being the same whom the Lord had appointed in the stead of Saul.

God having at first chosen for King, the tallest that was in Israel, chuseth the second.

38 DAVID persecuted.

cond time the least that was in the house of Isbais: The first shall be last, and the last shall bee first, (saith the Lord) who then chose the last to bee the first. There is no difference of time with God, in whose eternitie there is neither first nor second. The eldest may be stoutest, but are not usually the wisest. That tendernesse that commonly enfeebleth the Children of our old Age, maketh the organs of their understanding more tender and delicate. The cold of him that engendreth, gives them the more wisdom, and his organs the better discourse: whence it comes, that if the last begotten be commonly the weakest, yet they are oft and many times the wisest. He that bringeth David from the sheep-hooke hooke to the scepter, and exalteth him from the stable to the Kingdome, it is hee that humbled himselfe from his Kingdome to the stable : Hee that is both a shepheard and a King, maketh him a King who was but a shepheard. There is a kind of Analogie in all sorts of Commands. He that said that to know well how to order a table, was a signe that hee knew also how to marshall an Armie, might as well say, that hee that could well keepe a flock of sheep, had the skill how to governe a people well.

DAVID persecuted. 39

God from the fold hath taken Kings, from husbandry and hunting Tyrants. The husbandman will have the earth to produce that which naturally it doth not, and that it should produce produce hee wounds it. The hunts-man by shedding the blood of poore innocent beasts, groweth to bee delighted in Crueltie : But the sheeheard conducts his flock to pasture, brings it back to the fold, preserveth it from maladies, and defends it from wolves: his taking their milk, & their wooll, is a disburthening of them, not a wounding. Let Kings learne to take their Ministers sometimes even of the shee-fold. The best men are not alwayes in the greatest Palaces : a lowly Cottage oftentimes incloses a high spirit, and a ragged rock a very cleere diamond.

40 DAVID persecuted.

DAVID persecuted. 41

The good spirit departeth from Saul, and the evill one entreth into him.

Gods refusals are the devils purchases: where the one departs, if the other enters not, hee at least drawes very neere, either to perturb or to possesse.

Let us seeke out one that can play well (say the servants of Saul) that the King may bee eased, when hee is molested by the evill spirit.

THey beleevved peradventure that the Melanchiolick humour being stirred up, they

42 DAVID persecuted.

they that are oppressed by it might bee eased by melodie.

There have beene some of opinion that Melancholie is produced of the devill. The wiser sort if they did not be-leeve that it is of his production, yet judged that it may easily prove to be of his introduction, and therefore termed it the Bath of the devill, because it is the Lees, because it is black, because it hath an Analogie with the darknesse of sinne : The occasion of their beleefe was the seeing sometimes how by the fixation thereof men were lifted up or elevated in an extasie : Yea, and sometimes how the sharpnesse thereof irritating the braine, and stirring the Images therein, hath made some to speake things whereof before

DAVID persecuted. 43

before they were not held capable; whence I thinke it came to passe, that many oppressed with the greatnesse of the effects produced by this humour, have often judged the animall spirits to be infernall spirits.

I deny not, there are found some melancholicke persons possessed with devills, or that melancholy is an apt bath for the devill; but I affirme it not only of the grosse, thick and dark melancholie, but even of that also which produceth the subtilest and lightest spirits. He hath need of active bodily instruments for his operations in the body. Hee joynes himselfe therefore gladly with the subtilest and finest spirits, because they being in some sort of a middle nature, being corporeall

44 DAVID persecuted.

poreall and incorporeall, are a more proportionate receptacle for a spirit to unite himselfe to a thing that is meerely corporeall. An ancient Sage beleeveth that our soule which hee imagined to bee at first clothed with aire, had need of the like organs to joyne it to the body, whereunto hee thought it not united but assistant; neither are there wanting among the Divines those that have conceived the Angels to be clothed in like manner.

They tell Saul of David, that he is strong, a valiant man of war, can play well, is a wise and a comely person, and that God is with him.

How

DAVID persecuted. 45

HOW should the devill continue his possession, being to bee assailed with so many prerogatives, but that finding in them some rayes of the glorious Archangell Michael, hee must needs flie and hide himselfe in the bottomlesse pit of hell?

Saul sendeth to Ishai for his sonne that keepeth the sheepe, whom Ishai doth send unto him with some presents.

MEN ought not to come before Princes without presents, nor to depart from them without thanksgivings.

Saul

46 DAVID persecuted.

Saul maketh him his Armour-bearer, and writes vnto his father that hee doth not send him his sonne againe, because hee hath found favour in his sight.

ANd who is hee that is so gracious in the eyes of Saul ? It is even hee that is to take his Kingdome from him : It is an extraordinarie thing amongst men, that their loves become their overthrowes : the affections of a corrupt mind, like those of a diseased body, are alwayes pernicious ; nor are they motions of Nature, but the motions of that which hath destroyed Nature, shee inclines not to that which corrupts her, if

DAVID persecuted. 47

if shee be not already corrupted; and if shee bee corrupted, shee is dead, shee is gone.

David sung and played when Saul was vexed with the Devill, and then the Devill left him, not because of Davids musick, but his Goodnesse.

HAd the devill a bodie, Musick might haply bee able to chace him out, being unable to endure the power of Melodie : hee who is a friend to it, is an enemy to sinne. One that writ hereof, tooke the delighting in Harmonie, to be a morall signe of Prædestination : Sinne discomposeth all the consonancies in man, making a discord.

48 DAVID persecuted.

cord between the inferiour and superiour parts, which is the cause of all evill, and finally of the last of all dissonancies, which is Death.

If Health bee but a Harmony of the Temperament, and sicknesse a dissonancie, why are humours molested? why farther distempered with divers medicaments, and not rather reduced to a true temper with consonancies? Musick would be the truest medicine for all Maladies, if wee knew the right and true proportion, and how to apply to each that kind of Consonancie that would correct it: If any acromatick musick hath beene able to stir up the melancholik humour and to inrage it, why should not the contrary bee effectuall to qualifie and restraine it? If

DAVID persecuted. 49

If Nature in our maladies did happily feele that due consonancie that were requisite, shee would peradventure rouze up her selfe as well as the string of an Instrument ; which though it be without life, yet stirs and moveth it selfe, as soone as it feeleth a perfect union. Shee discovers the truth hereof, in those that are stung or bitten by the Tarantula, when wee see that Nature strives not to deliver her selfe from that poyson, untill shee bee first stirred with that Consonancie, whose proportion doth correct her. This is not proper to that malady alone, but all other I beleieve would in the like manner bee cured, if the Consonancies of all were as well knowne : But the ignorance of men, and the

C discomposed

50 DAVID persecuted.

discomposed nature of Sinne, makes us runne to the Physician, when wee should have recourse to the Musician.

The Philistims come to assault the Israelites, Saul with his Armie goeth to encounter them, each of them planteth his Armie on the edge of a hill, and leave the valley between them : There was in the Philistims Army a man called Goliah.

HEe was a Giant, and hee was a bastard ; The Giant hath for his Correlative the rash and foole-hardy : hee being greater

DAVID persecuted. 51

greater than men, thinks himselfe equall with God, as if where Humanitie doth end, there must needs Divinitie begin, and that there were not rather an infinite distance betweene. This is that Generation that opened the Cataracts of Heaven, which made the sea overflow the Land; Antiquitie could no way describe them so well as to describe their fighting against God. The greatest individuals of one Species, are for the most part Lucifers.

Hee was a Bastard, and Bastards are commonly valourous, because they come of Parents that were a morous. The Birth and Parentage, which ordinarily makes men hide their Talents, with the glories of their forepassed Ancestors, which bringeth them that are present and living asleep, hath no place in these who being oftentimes poore and despised, yet finding in themselves the spirit of those that begot them, in a desperate manner, get up to the steepest of the mount of Glory, alwayes egged on by the bitter touches of their spotted beginning; the continuall reproach and perpetuall spurre of generous spirits. But if on the contrarie their minds bee dejected with their miseries into a dead sleep, and will not be excited and awakened with the sharp stings of Honour, they are not worthy to be reckoned amongst men; whence it ariseth that Bastards most commonly light upon the extremes either of valour or of basenesse.

52 DAVID persecuted.

o

This Goliah defieth the Israelites to a single combat, hee requires that the fortune of the whole warre may bee restrained to the fortune of one petty duell.

TO hazard their whole fortune, without hazarding at the same time all their forces, hath beene taken to be no well advised course: which yet peradventure might doe well enough, if men could be content to lose all their fortune, before they had lost all their forces. The present victories then might facilitate the future. But such Conditions if ever they be promised, are very seldome observed. Such single Combats are but Preludiums to set battailes, and the happie successe therein is rather a signe that men may conquer, than that they have done it. The Constellation of that party whose Champion hath beene Victor, is then taken to be stronger, when it shall appeare that hee is governed by that which appertaines to the King, and not by his owne peculiar.

C 3 promised,

54 DAVID persecuted.

There was none amongst the Israelites, but was afraid of this man. The King promiseth to give him his daughter in Marriage, that shall overcome him.

Rewards

Rewards make valour appear, which lay hid before : they produce it, they do not create it. It is great prudence in men to moderate their promises when they are in great dangers : To make too large ones, is a token of fearefulness, and oftentimes doth not prevent the danger, but changeth it : To deliver from great dangers, yeelds great reputation ; Rewards increase strength and reputation, and strength endangers the State : From hence it comes that Promises are not kept, not because they are made with purpose not to keep them, but because men are changed with their change of fortune, and hee that should performe, is no longer the same that promised.

56 DAVID persecuted.

David, who was returned home, comes now into the Armie, to bring certaine presents to the Officers, under whom his Brethren did serve : Hee enquires concerning the businesse in hand : Hee askes what shall be the reward. His elder brother rebukes him of pride and overweening.

THis man discernes not Pride from Fortitude, because hee looked on his brother with an envious eye, not with an eye of love. There are many vertues which have their operations common with vice, eing distinguish ed only by the Intent :

DAVID persecuted. 57

Intent : which because it cannot be seene, is judged of by others, and mens judgements are not alwayes without passion, it seldome happens that they judge without error. He would not have any adventure on that which hee dares not adventure on : Those defects that are common, seeme rather the defects of mankind, than of any particular persons : hee layes the blame on us, that by being free from such defects himselfe, acquites nature of them too.

C 5 David.

58 DAVID persecuted.

David is brought before Saul, who seeing him so young, telleth him that he is not able to fight with the Giant, who was experienced in warre from his youth.

PRinces ought not to put any upon a great enterprise, who hath not first beene brought up and tried in things of the like nature. Danger hath not the same looke with it when wee are neere it, as when wee are at a distance; when tis far off from us, our understanding represents only the Honour and the Profit; but when wee approach face to face, wee see nothing oftentimes, but the horreur of Death. It

DAVID persecuted. 59

It is true that Courage is a reall thing in a man, yet nevertheless hee knowes not that he hath it, till experience hath made him know that hee hath had it. There are many that prove better upon triall than they thought they should have done ; and many come short of the opinion they had of themselves. Wise men are very fearfull of danger, because they have considered well of it : but when they come to try it, and are no longer to consider of it, they stand no longer in feare of it. On the contrary, they which are of little judgement, imagining all things alike, when they find it otherwise than they imagined, they grow also many times to be other manner of men, than before they held themselves for.

David

60 DAVID persecuted.

David to encounter this doubt of Saul, declareth how hee had smitten Beares, and how hee had slaine Lions.

TO recount our owne doughty Acts is oftentimes vanitie, here it is of ne-cessitie : hee did not rehearse it to shew that hee had overgone great dangers, but to undergoe greater ; not to be commended, but to bee commanded.

Saul resolves to let David goe to fight ; Hee puts on him his owne Armour, which David being not able to manage, puts it off.

EVEN as little men cannot fight well with great Armour,

DAVID persecuted. 61

mour, so neither can the lesser Princes with those greater. He that hath not fitted himselfe with armour of his owne, is not to fight in anothers. Patroclus came not to his Death till hee put on that of Achilles. This is the common Doctrine of the Politicians, yet I take it sometimes to faile in regard that there are often found men of that worth, that like Ostriges, they convert others Armes into their owne substance. This may come to passe, when one receiving an Armie without a Head, makes himselfe to bee obeyed, and managing them by his valour, brings himselfe into great estimation ; If Generals that were no Princes, have sometimes drawne by such meanes the Armies to be at their their Devotion, and have gotten Kingdomes by such Armies as were not their owne, why should not a valorous Prince be able to doe it by the Armes of his Friends?

62 DAVID persecuted.

David goeth with his staffe and his sling, with five smooth stones against the Giant.

HEE had no need of other Armour, hee was armed with his confidence in God.
Hee which hath this Armour, can never perish: If we happen to be deceived; tis because wee deceive our selves, having our confidence in those things in which wee ought not, or not having so much as wee ought;
to

DAVID persecuted. 63

to bring forth a true act of Confidence, is a very difficult thing: There is requisite a great assistance of God to make one truly and only rely on the helpe of God. If such acts were more frequent amongst us, we should not haply account so many Events to bee miracles. They that teach us how notwithstanding our Confidence in God, wee ought to doe as much as wee can, or otherwise in stead of trusting in God wee should presume upon him, their meaning may haply bee, that it were but a rash presumption to perswade our selves that wee have produced any true act of Confidence; but not if wee firmly beleve that God for his part would assuredly helpe us, when wee for our part should should produce such an A&.

64 DAVID persecuted.

The Giant derides David, curseth & disdaines him, but hee putting a stone in his sling, throwes it at him, hitteth him in the forehead, makes him fall groveling on his face to the ground, and running upon him cutteth off his head with his sword.

IT hath beene an ordinarie thing in single combats, betweene a giant-like man and one of a meaner stature, that the little man hath had alwayes the better : The Philosophers would attribute the cause to
the

DAVID persecuted. 65

the Courage which is counted to be greater in the lesser heart; a small fire will heat a little roome, when a larger will scarce bee warmed with a great one. I have no assurance in this opinion, but would rather adventure (if I should not be thought too bold) to affirme that Courage consisteth not in the Heart, as is commonly held both by the ignorant vulgar, and many of the learned : Who knoweth that it is not rather produced by the same imaginative facultie out of which feare also proceedeth ? how many that in their health were exceeding faint hearted, in raging fits have become rash and desperate, which was occasioned only by the heat of the Braine ? for if it proceeded from that of the Heart,

66 DAVID persecuted.

Heart, they that are distempered with fevers should be alwayes the most couragious : and what is it that makes hopelesse men so resolute ? Is it their Heart forsooth growne lesse or more heated than it was before ? or their understanding rather which suggesteth unto them that there is no other way to escape death but by encountering it ? To what purpose doe men speake to cowards to animate them ? Reasons may indeed worke upon the Braine, but are not able to heat the Heart : Who knoweth not, that the not knowing of the danger makes men adventurous ? Whence it comes that the wisest are not alwayes the most couragious. Hardinesse (and herein I refer my selfe to the better better learned) is a certaine kind of madnesse, consisting haply in a hot distemper of the Braine, which permitteth no consideration or discourse of the danger of Death. Hee that in fighting thinkes hee shall be slaine, cannot fight couragiously. And albeit the Philosophers define the valiant man to be such a one as knowing the perils goes to encounter them, because it is just and honest, I beleieve it ought to be understood before hee entereth into those dangers, because after he is once engaged, if he knew them hee would faint. A wise man was of the minde, that fencers were more fearfull than others, because they knew the danger more than others : It is not therefore the Heart, but the Braine,

DAVID persecuted. 67

68 DAVID persecuted.

Braine, and if it come from the Heart, it must be in regard that the same is the originall of all the operations of the Minde. The Divines going a surer way, would resolve this problem by saying, that it hath beene the pleasure of God by humilitie to overthrow Pride, and by the least things to abase the greatest : If it were not so not only in men, but also in States and Empires, there would be no tides and ebbes in the world, but hee that was once the greatest should alwayes so continue, seeing hee could not be overcome by a lesser.

The Politicians would alledge Disdaine to be the cause : hee that despiseth his enemy, doth not strive with all his might,

DAVID persecuted. 69

might, but employing some part only, and that with no great heed, is often overcome by one who being weaker than hee, opposeth him with the utmost of his strength and cunning: One of the greatest errors that I have observed in great Potentates, hath beene to see how applying their forces on an enterprise, they have rather taken measure of the enemy than themselves, opposing against him only so much of their strength, as they conjectured to bee answerable to the present affaires; and whereas with a greater power they might have beene sure of victory, with an equall one they have either lost it, or at least prolonged the warres with more expence of men and money. It is very difficult to measure, sure the proportion of things by their Beginnings. Childrens garments must be allowed to be somewhat larger than themselves, lest they growing greater, the garments become too little. It is enough for a meaner man if at the beginning hee bee enabled to resist a greater, that so he may but get him reputation, and by the meanes thereof hee can procure himselfe adherents and protectors.

70 DAVID persecuted.

The Giant was no sooner slaine, but the Army of the Philistims being discomfited, betakes it selfe to flight; and the Israelites pursue and slay them.

That

THat Armie whose trust is in the straightnesse of some passage, in the height of any situation, in the strength of their Trenches, in the valour of a man, or in any one speciall thing of good defence, is easily overcome by him who shall be assuredly perswaded, that if he can but overthrow such a part, or slay such a man, or passe through the difficulties of such a hill, or such fortifications, he shall find no other resistance, and therefore shall hee set forward very stoutly and courageously : Because men having once lost that by which they were confident they should overcome, being dejected, thinke there is nothing left that can defend them against the valour of their enemies. But that Armie which

72 DAVID persecuted.

which relies upon it intire selfe equally throughout is in a manner invincible; It may peradventure bee routed, utterly discomfited it cannot; Every one will fight to the Death, because every one trusting in himselfe, will not distrust of the victory, untill he hath lost his life.

The slaughter being ended, David returnes with the Giants head. Saul enquires of Abner who he is: Abner not knowing him, goes to meet him, and brings him unto Saul: He askes him whose sonne hee is: hee answers, he is the Sonne of Ishai.

See

DAVID persecuted. 73

See how fading or how displeasing the memory of benefits is in Princes; either Saul did not remember David, or else hee was not willing to remember him: Hee that but a little before had found so much favour in his sight, hath now lost it both in his sight and memorie: The memory of a benefit lasts well, if it lasts as long as the benefir, and the respect that is begotten thereby often dies before its Father. If Reasons may bee rendered for the affection of a Prince towards a Courtier, bee they drawne of Profit or out of Pleasure, or whether accompanied with Honestie, yet is it a thing but of small continuance: If it follow Reason, it formes a habit of which commeth satietie, and

D

if

74 DAVID persecuted.

if it be not grounded on Reason, the ground of such affection faileth. It is a vanity to thinke our selves able to yeeld a reason of the affectionate favours of Princes : Those are great, and slowly will they end, for which there can no reason be given how they came to begin. There are starres which incline them thereunto by their influences, neither are those loves alwayes happie, for neither are the aspects of these alwayes favourable : In this manner haply that great scholler meant it, though hee was not so understood, when hee seemed to doubt, whether any reason could be given of the Inclinations of Princes, or whether they depended on the Course of their Nativitie. And whereas

DAVID persecuted. 75

whereas in all other occurrents hee had shewed himselfe a friend unto reason, hee never spake of this Argument or matter, but made a present recourse unto Destinie, which having once coupled and conjoynd with the course of the Nativity, there is no doubt but he meant it by the operation of the starres. Politicians may cease to teach the waies to obtaine the favour of Princes; men must be borne to it, not taught it. A man may by his valour and wisdom make himselfe well esteemed, but yet not beloved.

When hee had made an end of speaking, the soule of Ionathan was knit with the D 2 soule

76 DAVID persecuted.

soule of David, in a knot of Amitie.

Wonderfull things are Friendship and Love, whence they proceed (withall respect, and far from all presumption be it spoken) men have not yet well declared for all their Philosophie. Some have thought them to bee the daughters of Abundance, and of Want; but this were a taxing of Love and Amitie with imperfection, and to deny the prime and chiefe love which wee call the holy spirit : for in the three divine Persons there can bee no defect. The rest of the Philosophers, have deduced the originall from the similitude of the parties loving, some from

DAVID persecuted. 77

from the Heaven, some from the starres, some from the temper, some from the Manners, & some finally from the features, yet peradventure they have all mistaken : for if love came from the resemblance, a man should rather love the male than the female ; and whereas Love is but seldome reciprocall, it should be alwayes answered with like affection ; seeing one thing cannot be said to bee like another, but that the other must also be like to it. I beleeeve that there are some Constellations conducing to Friendship, and others to Love, which produce in their subject, a kind of lovely Character which commeth not of the Temper, but rather of some (I know not what) celestiall impressions which the

78 DAVID persecuted.

Heavens and starres with their operations have left imprinted in that tender body, and that hee is most beloved that hath most thereof, and that hee who hath lesse cannot be the object of Love, but onely of good will or respect. The reason whereof is because Beautie is the object of Love : Yet not Beauty which is like unto ours, but that which is greater, otherwise there would not (no not in Patria) be any love towards God: And if sometimes here we love our equal, it is either because then wee see none more worthy, or because wee doe not reflect thereon. But onely that excellence which is in God is the adequate object of Love, because that onely which is in God is the adequated object of our will : and if wee could see him as hee is, hee should infallibly make us love with him. But because wee are here as but in Via, he is not so represented to us : we turne our eyes to admire that celestiall Beautie where we finde it best imprinted among us, and is often termed Gratia divisata, which consisteth neither in the fymmetrie of the Humours, nor the Proportion of the Lineaments, albeit it oftentimes accordeth and agreeth well with them both when it is not hindered by any defect in the matter, and so sometimes, but not alwaies the fairest bee the best beloved. Hence we may learne the reason of the little correspondence, and the much mutability in Love : It is not alwayes counterchanged, for if the greater Beauty be beloved, that which is beloved will not love that which loveth it. It is changed as oft as there is represented to us greater beauty than which wee love. Yet it is not sufficient that it be represented unto us, if wee doe not reflect upon with a desire, and therefore many leave not their first love, because they permit not any new object of love to enter into their mind.
our

DAVID persecuted. 79

D 4 terchanged

80 DAVID persecuted.

Saul suffereth not David to returne home, but setteth him over his Armie: hee is very gracious in the eyes of the people, and particularly

DAVID persecuted. 8 r ticularly of the servants of the King.

THe subject that is growne great, diminisheth the glory of his Master : What course shall a Prince take then that is but of slender worth ? If hee take not worthy men to him, how will he governe his Kingdome ? If hee take such, how will hee be a King ? Hee is not King over others that hath in his Palace a greater man than himselſe. If his ſtate be unſet-tled, he loſeth his ſtate ; if the ſtate be ſafe, his reputation : With great reaſon men might complaine of Nature, if they were not for the moſt part commanded by the better. He that holds the Scepter, is not the D. 5 King.

82 DAVID persecuted.

King, hee is but the servant of his Minister who obeyeth him. Crownes come by Inheritance, tis true ; but not the faculties of ruling : If fortune give those to whom shee pleaseth, Nature disposeth the other to him that deserves. That Proposition of the Philosophers is most true, that some are bound to Command and others to obey : This is confirmed by him that divided the signes of the Zodiack into commanding and obeying signes. This truth is not overthrowne by seeing him to hold a Scepter that was borne fitter for the mattock ; though hee play the King, he is not a King.

David.

DAVID persecuted. 83

David commeth to Ierusalem, with the Head of the Giant, the women meet him, rejoycing, and ascribe more to him in their singing than to Saul, who is displeased thereat.

Short and unhappie are the Favours of the People; short, for like the floating of the sea it is tost with every winde; a Sea that in the same haven wherein one time it hath secured ships, another sinkes them. Unhappie are they, because it is as a violent starre, whose radially beames may be good, but not lucky; it never raiseth any but to make their down-falls the greater: unhappie love because it hath hath for a Correlative the Princes hatred : The Prince is not Lord of that people that loveth another better than him : If he be Master of their bodies and meanes, the other is Master over their Hearts and minds : But good God ! how shall a man behave himselfe ? must a mans valour needs become his infelicitie ? A wise man may indeed not desire applause, but hee cannot hinder it, except he leave those qualities for which he is applauded, or depart from them that applaud him. Ought hee then to forgoe the Talents which God hath bestowed on him ? or employ them only among wild beasts in the horrid wildernesses, or in solitary places ? The eminent vertue of men, if it be not the cause of their

84 DAVID persecuted.

DAVID persecuted. 85

their Death, is so of their Banishment: At the first they are sought to out of necessitie, and then againe they are expelled under colour of necessitie. The Tree that was esteemed for its shadow, to shelter us from the heat of the summer, is afterwards cut downe to defend us from the cold of the winter. The same man whom Princes embraced in the heat of their necessity, is he whom they cut downe in the cold of their jealousy.

Saul since that never looked aright on David.

Nature teacheth when wee looke on our enemy to give a violent Metum to our aspect,

86 DAVID persecuted.

aspect, whether by staring fiercely, or looking askew upon him, to strike him with our very spirits, and with the greatest quantity and worst quality that may be. He that thinks them not to issue out of the eyes, and that they proceed not to touch the object, when it is neere them, is deceived, and hee that beleeves it, will not deny that they have their operation on that subject.
If the only diversitie of the aspect make the selfe same radiation of the starre, to be sometimes gracious, and sometimes deadly, why should not the eyes, being the starres of this little world, have power to di-versifie their effects, according to the diversitie of their aspects.

DAVID persecuted. 87

It was not long ere the Devill assaulted Saul againe; and when David plaied and sung, to deliver him from the oppression of the spirits, hee with a speare in his hand would have slaine him, but David avoided the blow and departed.

THat Tyrant is put to a shrewd pinch, that is growne jelous of a subject of worth and reputation: If hee kill him, hee feares the rising of the people: If he suffer him, hee doubts his raysing of them. Now hee accounts himselfe happy if in his oppressing him, hee

88 DAVID persecuted!

hee could make the faults of his will to be laid upon the ignorance of his understanding, and with the imputation of a mad-man smother that of an ungratefull. A most wicked peece of Policie, to make our greatest defects the best instruments of our Government : There hath beene one that made use of drunkennesse, to secure himselfe of the most valorous man of his Armie ; and Saul doth the like by his vexation with spirits to make David away : Such colourable carriages doe move the ignorant rout to compassion, rather than to rebellion, whiles they give place to Princes to bewaile the death of those, whom themselves have slaine, and to make them beleeve that their teares of joy are teares of lamentation.

Saul

DAVID persecuted. 89

Saul perceived that God was with David, when hee could not slay him with the casting of his speare, from which his valour could not defend him because hee did not expect it, neither his wisedome because hee did not foresee it.

HEe that will know when God is with his enemy (and this is a morall and not a naturall knowledge) let him not consider the conquests made by his valour, and by that which wee call Prudence, but the helps he receiveth from naturall inanimate things, as Clouds, winds, fires, snow, ice, raine and

90 DAVID persecuted.

and tempests ; for they, as it is written, fulfill the will of God. What availeth our valour if God be not with us ? and what is our Prudence if God doe not governe it ? It is nothing (I speake of politick Prudence,) for it is a good connexion of present, things with the future and those that are past : but of that which is past, and which is present, we know but little, and of what is to come wee know nothing : For my part (in regard of future things) I esteeme that as wee give unto God an unproper attribute of that which hee hath not, so we suppose also a vertue in man which is not in him. God hath not properly any prescience, because there is nothing future in respect of him, neither is there there any Prudence in man, because hee knoweth not what is to come. That which is in God is more properly to be termed knowledge, because it is intuitive, and the other in man may be called Chance, because it works on a subject which may be or not be.

DAVID persecuted. 91

Then Saul began to bee afraid of David.

THat the Prince should be afraid of his subject, and the subject stand in feare of his Prince, hath beene accounted a Harmonie to hold the State happily together. This opinion howsoever it may seeme a witty conceit, while such feare keeps in the meane, & groweth NOT

92 DAVID persecuted.

not excessive, notwithstanding is most false: It is true that hot and dry may be corrected by degrees, even as heavy and light may by their Counterpoises, because the degrees of the one are knowne, and the weight also of the other; but the affections of the minde can hardly be counterpoised, because they have no firmenesse nor measure. Feare hath too sharpe a prick for those that produce it, and is too troublesome a passion to them that owne it; the one with the qualities that make them to bee feared, are spurred on forward after the Government: The other cannot willingly hold themselves in, because feare is a motion that is not naturall but violent. There is no man that desireth not to free himsef of it : The greater part attempt it, and in attempting it the State is troubled. If the Prince be hee that feareth, he turneth to be a Tyrant ; and if any subject make himsef feared, t'will breed a Conspiracie; if the whole Communalty, a Rebellion. The subject ought to feare the Justice of his Prince, and the Prince that of God ; if a subject make himsef feared, he is no longer a subject, or intends not to be so ; if the Prince be afraid, he is no longer Prince, or not like long to bee. To thinke to make a Prince good by Art, may chance prove but fopperie; they are rather borne to it than brought to it : The goodnesse of a Prince consisteth in I know not what inexpressible mystery, that

DAVID persecuted. 93

94 DAVID persecuted.

that cannot be knowne, nor can be taught : It wanteth nothing of the last Individuation which gives it the being, and that same being and no other. This conceit of mine resolves the Probleme that demandeth how it comes to passe, that many who in the managing of great affaires, were held to be capable of the highest dignity and Dominion, having after attained to it, beene found to be unfit for it.

Saul made David a Colonel over a thousand Souldiers, and said after that hee would give him his daughter Merob to be his wife, supposing that to obtaine her, her, hee would so far adventure against the Philistims, that hee would be slaine.

DAVID persecuted. 95

Saul would that David should be slaine, but God permitted not that hee should be past the shame of being wicked, till it could no more hurt David, that Saul was past it. This error of advancing men that are rising, and not to know afterward how to take them downe, hath often happened even to those that justly and without any offence of God ought to have done it. A starre though but a Comet, because it is a light that is newly up, draweth all mens eyes to it, even theirs whose dammage it threatneth.

96 DAVID persecuted.

threatneth. A man of worth can no sooner begin to appeare, but Princes begin to embrace him, thinking to raise themselves by his Friendship, when indeed hee raiseth himselfe by theirs, not heeding that in stead of growing they decrease. It is a difficult thing for one to advance himselfe, if he be not protected or impugned by a great one : Many times when one hath begun to advance another by protecting him, hee raiseth him higher by crossing of him, not because it is likely he would then second him, but because he knoweth not how to extingguish him. Men are ashamed yea, and sometimes afraid to shew themselves open enemies of one that is thought to bee their friend who hath deserved well

DAVID persecuted. 97

well of them, and is accounted valorous. They seeke then by subtile sleights to overthrow him, and therewith advance him the more. They are not resolved to use force untill their subtilities faile them, and when there is no securitie in using of force. Neither yet doe I commend it if they then goe about to second them, for the things that are forward in growing should never be seconded. Ca- tiline by being opposed was overthrowne, and though in Ca- esar it had not the like effect, it happened so, because he was first seconded, and afterwards opposed : Yet was it better to once to resist than alway to second him, because where the victory was doubtfull, the losse had beene certaine. I am firmely

98 DAVID persecuted.

ly perswaded that if Catiline had prevailed to be Emperour, and Cesar had beene slaine, the writers would have blamed the impugning of Catiline, and commended the opposing of Cesar; because there are many Politicians that make use of examples not to confirme their reasons, but to frame them. The errors of men consist in watering the Plant that groweth, placing it in their owne garden, delighting in the Beauty of it, and not knowing that it is a kind of Wolfes-bane, untill they strain at it and pull it up, and then it killeth them. If the great ones knew what hurt they receive by shewing themselves enemies to a little one, they would not permit any sparkes to fly forth, if they were not such sparkes

DAVID persecuted. 99

as forthwith give fire to the gunne, whose bullet should destroy them.

Saul marries his daughter Merob to Adriel, whom hee had promised to David, and causeth it to bee told unto him, that hee intendeth to give him his other daughter Michol that loved him: David answereth, that hee is not worthy to be the Kings sonne in law, because hee is poore and of as meane pedigrees.

Marriages are of power to further thing formerly

100 DAVID persecuted.

ly began, whether tending to enmity or to amitie. Saul seeth not how in deceiving David he deceives himselfe; and thinking to lay an impediment in his way to the Kingdome, hee opens him the way thereunto. Some one hath made use of such meanes with better successe, but with more cunning. Hee was a private person, and not yet a Prince, when he married his Sister to his equall, not unto his inferiour, to lull him asleep without advancing him; and because hee to whom hee married her was not so wise as David, hee hoped by such a marriage to have help to strengthen his side, and to find a just occasion to oppresse his Kinsman. But Saul had no need of *David*s help to attaine to that Kingdome

DAVID persecuted. 101

Kingdome which hee possessed already : Hee was without comparison greater than hee, and might rather feare to increase the reputation of David, than to bring his prudent watchfulnesse asleep, which was not like to give him any just occasion to oppresse him. It is no safe advice to advance men to the end to abuse them : The advancement is alwayes successfull, but there is difficultie often found in abasing them. This is written for one of the neatest peeces of policie, but I set it downe amongst the most confused.

Saul sendeth word to David, that hee doth not disdain his poverty, and that hee E 3 demands

102 DAVID persecuted.

demands no other Dowry than a hundred fore-skins of the Philistims.

Here comes now on the Stage one of the Engines which were hidden under the Honour of Marriage ; to bring David in danger to be slaine by the Philistims. If Nature had not often accompanied the most certaine perils with the most conspicuous glories, it were a commendable course to expose them to such dangers whose reputation terrifies us ; but because neere the greatest downefals are the highest hills, it is not safe to let men clime up the tops of those mountaines, where they may as well raise up as ruine themselves. Occasion

DAVID persecuted. 103

sion is it which makes men wise, or which brings them to bee knowne. Hee that at first sight could see into men of ability by a hidden token, thould under pretence of Honour make them spend their dayes in delicacie and idlenesse, and not suffer men to have a sight of that light, which untill it be stricken out doth never appeare. The seeds of Plants that are kept in vessels of Gold, or of Pearle, or of pretious stone, are honoured thereby, but being asburied and become barren, they bring forth no buds unlesse they be first cast into the Soile of the earth.
Without motion there is no Augmentation. Resting is imperfection in things that may increase: In God only it is perfection, because in him there is no Augmentation. It is not in our power to make our selves great. The utmost limit of our Actions is in the hand of men, or of Fortune. How many that have beene very able in Potentiâ, have come to their grave without having any opportunitie to performe an Act worthy their sufficiencie?

104 DAVID persecuted.

Saul speaketh to Jonathan, and to all his servants, that they should kill David: Jonathan advertiseth David, and putteth Saul in mind how much hee is obliged to him, and what injustice it were to slay him.

But

BUt of what effect bee such Remonstrances of Obligations? The chiefe Obligation which a Tyrant pretends to have, is the conservation of his Dominion, and his greatest Justice is to put to death the best. To oblige were a thing very desirable if it were only to oblige, and not to bind himselfe for a farther obliging. That Obligation which seemed compleat to him that produced it, comes to be accepted but as a beginning by him for whom it was wrought. Hee that will bind another by benefits, must joyne them one to another: The report of the one must not cease before hee hath added another. The linkes that are not chained one to another doe not make up a Chaine. The resemblance hath a great force to move and receive in the Imagination even the Phantasmes that were dead.

106 DAVID persecuted.

Time is a destroyer of all things ; where it destroyeth not the greatnesse of mens Actions, it will destroy the marveling at it : for it frames them into a habit, and that being once attained, makes the operations come on without difficultie, and without any reflecting. That which is passed already doth cancell the obligation of private men ; and with Tyrants that also which is to come, whether they be gratefull or ungratefull, they are alwayes afraid, that they will oblige them either by their owne rewards, or through discontent of not being rewarded, will make insurrection. The

DAVID persecuted. 107

The words of Jonathan seemed to have appeased Saul, who giveth order that David returne to Court.

THe Truth which passeth through our understanding doth not use to flie away so fast, but that our will taketh hold and embraceth it, unlesse the malice of our senses defile it. It is not so hard to withdraw a wicked man from his evill purposes, as it is difficult afterward to keepe him in a good mind, thereto is requisite in a manner a perpetuall assistance, for as soone as you leave him hee returneth to that from which you withdrew him.

David

108 DAVID persecuted.

David returneth to the Court as in former times.

THey must not all bee put to death of whose valour wee stand in feare, that thereby wee may be secured. To use a like proceeding is inconvenient, when the persons are of a different disposition. The benefits that serve to aid and provoke the wickedly minded against their Prince, are but as Chaines, whereby generous mindes are drawne to their devotions. So that to oblige them is to bind them: But the ruine of the good proceeds from the multitude of the Evill: which are not only evill, but doe counterfeit as if they were good; so that because it is a difficult thing

DAVID persecuted. 109

thing to discerne Truth and Falshood, men will rather deceive themselves in hindering a thousand that ought to bee cherished, than in cherishing one alone that ought to be hindered; and because it is easier to be ingratefull than to maintaine their gratitude, though they beleeve not alwayes that it is necessarie to put deserving men to death, yet they feigne sometimes that they beleeve it, that they may cover the basenesse of their minds with the forcible jelousies of their Soveraigntie.

The evill spirit returning againe to molest Saul, when David played, Saul attempteth againe to smite him

110 DAVID persecuted.

him to the wall with a speare, but hee turneth aside and escapeth.

WHen the subject once finds his Prince to bee afraid of him, hee stands alwayes in feare of the Prince; such jelousies have no other fire to consume them but impossibility; for he that stands in feare, beleeves that whatsoever may happen unto him, will. The first perill wee incurre in any thing may be ascribed to fortune, the second if it bee the same is commonly attributed to our indiscretion. But the goodnesse of David makes him to be excusable in regard his exceeding good conscience made him so adventurous: David trusteth

DAVID persecuted. III

trusteth Saul, because Saul might safely have trusted David. As we naturally imagine other men to looke like our selves, so wee suppose them of ourowne conditions. That which shall happen to a man, is not alwayes the same that should. The consequences of the future are fallible, because the Antecedents presupposed by us are false. Hee that knew well the customes and manners of all men as they are, and upon occasion should make use of them in conjecturing what is to come, should not need to have recourse to the vanity of Astrologers.

Saul causeth Davids house to be compassed with Soul-diers

III.2 DAVID persecuted.

diers that should kill him, yet gives them not order to enter into the house, peradventure because in those times it was reputed too great a wickednesse to kill one in his bed. Having given over himselfe a prey to wickednesse, hee had not haply as yet lost all respect unto goodnesse.

THat men are not altogether wicked, nor yet perfectly good, is not peradventure because they know not how to be so, but because they cannot possibly be so: It consisteth rather in the strength of nature than of will: For if Nature have

DAVID persecuted. 113

have left no power to our feebleness to reach to the height of goodness, why shall we believe that shee hath left any to our corruption to come to the extremity of evill? He that blamed a Tyrant in that behalf, and thereupon did pretend that their ruine was for the most preordained, declared his beleefe to be, that the mischiefes which are destructions were conservations; He discovered his not knowing, that the evill which is not a being, cannot subsist without the supporting of that good which is a being; and finally he made it manifest, that he had not read the Master of those Doctrines, with which hee had honoured his writings, because his saying was, that the Tyrant, when hee goeth not in
the

114 DAVID persecuted.

the way of goodnesse, must not suffer it to bee quite out of his sight, and that if he will not be good throughout, yet that hee must at least have a Moity of goodnesse.

Michol tels David what perill hee is in ; shee lets him downe through a window, and layes an Image in his place in the Bed.

God makes use of the Acts of human wittinesse, as Instruments of his Providence ; those footsteps that flie it, are the selfe same that lead to it : Saul makes David his sonne in Law, to bring him to his end ;
and

DAVID persecuted. 115

and because he is his sonne in Law, he escapes it : That sentence, That the Destinies lead those that follow them, and draw those that are unwilling, is an unadvised saying. They that wrote it were deceived either in denying the Providence of God, or in the manner of expressing it : Hee disposeth all things sweetly : He conducteth them that goe with a good will, and those that are unwilling to goe, are conducted (if I may so say) by themselves.

Saul sendeth some againe to take David, they bring word that hee is sick in his bed : Finally, he loseth all respect of bed, and will have

116 DAVID persecuted.

have him slaine how ever; but instead of David they find an Image : Saul reproveth his daughter Michol, who excuseth her selfe by her Husbands threats.

MEN in their desires invest themselves so far in their owne interest, that they make themselves beleeve that every one that knowes them should cooperate with them : but if they also invested themselves in the interest of others, and did not consider every one in reference to themselves, but rather each one in reference to himselſe, and whereas they thinke but of theirs alone, they formed

DAVID persecuted. 117

formed as many interests as there are men, they would not find themselves so oft deceived. Saul considereth Michol as his daughter, and by consequence in reference to himselfe; if he had considered her as Dauids wife, then he had considered her in reference to her selfe, and had not found it strange that she should save her husband out of her fathers hands: When women depart from their friends houses, they oftentimes leave nothing behinde them but Love.

Saul sends some after David, they find him in the Company of the Prophets prophesying with them; hee sends

118: DAVID persecuted.

sends others after him, and they find him in like manner : In the end full of anger and fury, he goes himselfe, and he also remains with them, and prophesieth in like manner.

THere are some so superstitious, that they account all things miraculous, because they are ignorant of their second causes : some againe are so head-strong, as to deny all miracles, because they know not the first cause ; and in conclusion there want not those that are so sacrilegious, that they will rather acknowledge the Devill to be the doer of such miraculous lous effects than God, because they themselves are more of the Devill than God. I know not whether Saul might be reckoned among these, or whether knowing the miracle, hee suffered himselfe neverthelesse to be transported by his anger and fury to contend with the Almighty. All sinners in regard of themselves doe undeifie him, yet there are found very few that doe desire to undeifie him, yet are there not wanting some, who in their choler would willingly they could reduce him to nothing, that hath brought them out of nothing. Hee that is in choler, I would say hath even lost his understanding, yea, I would thinke him starke mad, save that there remaineth only so much reason

in

102 DAVID persecuted.

in him, as sufficeth to make his workes worthy of chastisement : Choler (and perhaps I am not deceived) is a short fever ; which if it were in the humours as it is in the spirits, would prove to bee a frenzie, whereunto it is so neere of kin, that if by the little while it continues it were not knowne from the other, there would scarce be any such piercing eye that could discerne betwixt them : That little reason that remaines in the cholerick man makes him to differ from the mad man ; yet makes him worse than hee, because it makes him not only to erre, but to sinne.

David flies, and going to meet Jonathan, he asketh him what

DAVID persecuted. 121

what evill hee hath committed that should procure Saul to persecute him.

HEe knew not peradventure that an eminent Vertue is no lesse persecuted than an exorbitant Vice. I am of opinion that even Tyrants themselves doe like well, that their Ministers be men of valour and worth, but they would measure them as they doe cloth, by their arme, allowing them as much as will fit the person they represent, and no more ; Good Ministers are sometimes better than the best, because the best are sometimes as dangerous as the worst are dishonourable. It is a happinesse in Princes how good soever they be, to be served ved by good subjects equall to their affaires, for if they be of abilities above their employments, they neglect them, if beneath them, their employments ruine them. It is a fortunate thing therefore to happen on such as are fit for the purpose; seeing wee have no Instrument by which the degrees of worth may be measured, neither any one that knoweth justly how much every office requireth.

122 DAVID persecuted.

Jonathan answereth David that hee should not need to feare, because his father would not resolve on any enterprize without communicating the same

DAVID persecuted. 123

to him, and that he would advertize him thereof: But David doth not be-leeve that Saul would acquaint him with his purpose.

TO what end should a Tyrrant communicate his Ma-chinations? they are so shame-full, that hee cannot expect commendations: Hee is so distrustfull, that he will not seeke any counsell, and so farre from trusting others, that hee scarcely trusteth himselfe. One must needs beleve this Truth, when wee see that distrust-ing the better part of himselfe, which is Reason, his trust is wholly in his sense: when he

124 DAVID persecuted.

communicates his thoughts, he doth not impart them to have conference about them, but to command, not to be counselled concerning them, but to have them put in execution. He hath no regard of sonnes, or brethren, or wife, or friend. The interest of State is all in all with him, and besides it hee makes no account of any thing. A Tyrant is ordinarily so close by nature, and so enured by Art to conceale his intent, that when hee would willingly bee understood, hee cannot sometimes make them understand them. For not only men know not what hee thinkes, but many times they understand not what he sayes.

They

DAVID persecuted. 125

They agree that David should hide himselfe, and Jonathan should observe what the King saith when on the first day of the moneth he should note Davids absence from the table, and that by a signe betweene them hee should make knowne his fathers intent. Then they depart asunder renewing their oathes and covenants of friendship.

THe first day of the moneth being come, Saul seeing that David appeared not, flattering his desire hee would not

126 DAVID persecuted.

beleeye that David absented himselfe for feare, but rather for some uncleannesse: when he sees him not appeare on the second day, hee asketh Jonathan what is become of David, who answereth that hee is gone to celebrate the solemnity; then Saul reproachfully reproveth his sonne for preferring his friendship with David before matter of State, by reason that while David lived hee could not be established in the Kingdom.

To chastise an offence committed is proper to the Law: that which would be committed is reserved to God; that which may be committed is peculiar to a Tyrant: when it is not justice, but a point of State that seekes the life of a subject, there there is scarce any remedie: if David had offended, he might have hoped for pardon, and haply have obtained it: But where there is no offence, there can be no recourse to clemencie, nor expectation of it. Those merits that would have counter-vailed his faults, doe condemne his innocencies. A great occasion it must bee to put an innocent to death, and because it is great, it is insuperable. When justice hath had her course in condemning, shee leaves Clemencie her place to absolve; but where it is injustice to condemne, the putting to death proceeds of selfe interest. It is good for him that dyes, if hee dye innocent; but in regard of the world it is better being guilty when he is condemned.

DAVID persecuted. 127

128 DAVID persecuted.

Hee that hath done an offence, and demands pardon, speakes not a word but to the Princes praise, hee confesseth his fault, declareth the vertue of Justice in the Prince, and in demanding his pardon, he shewes that hee doth also beleewe the vertue of clemencie to be in him. But all the words of the innocent sound to the blame of the Prince; hee shewes him to be unjust, hee declares him to be a Tyrant, hee seekes not to pacifie him; he incenses him, and cannot hope for mercy because hee cannot aske it: if hee pray the Prince to spare him his life, hee must needs discover the cause that moves him to take it away, and because hee discovers it, hee is made worthie of Death.

Jonathan

DAVID persecuted. 129

Jonathan demands of Saul, for what offence hee doth persecute David : but the King in a rage casts a speare at him, and he flies.

There is nothing more offensive to a Prince than to require him to declare what he desires to conceale. The word (why) or (when) imports an Interrogation, ought never to bee found in their mouthes that treat with Princes : The interrogating hath I know not what superiority, because it obligeth one to answer, and Princes are not to be obliged, but rather to be obeyed.

F 5

Jonathan

2130 DAVID persecuted.
Jonathan riseth from the table in a great anger, he goes the next morning where David was, and gives the signe according to their agreement. David comes out of the place where hee was hid: Ionathan informes him of his successe, and reiterating the oathes of their Confederacie, and the tokens of their Amity, not without tender teares they depart asunder.

What thing is Friendship? It is a union as one may say of two soules in one body,

DAVID persecuted. 131

bodie, which in a sort doe informe it, if not truly yet virtually; and if a soule be so much grieved when it is to depart out of an earthly body which it informed, why should it not also bee grievous to depart from another soule which she loved? Such a departure should be but as a death, were it not that the distance of place doth not breake off the union of those things that doe not possesse any place. But as in the parting of friends the souls are not so much afflicted, the bodies are grieved in forgoing the fomentation of those spirits that were a consolation to them. It is not credible that Nature having permitted us spirits to offend as with, hath not also granted that the spirits of a friend should bee comfortable comfortable unto us. Otherwise the spirits of Hatred and of Love should be the selfesame.

132 DAVID persecuted.

David flieth and commeth to Nob to Achimelech the Priest, who marvelling to see him alone, demands the occasion thereof. David answers that hee goes about the Kings service, who hath so commanded.

HEE saith truth, that hee goes about the Kings service, for in flying hee doth the King good service by bereaving him of occasion to doe a great outrage. His flight is not to escape chastisement for his offences,

DAVID persecuted. 133

fences, but to avoyd the mischievous requitall of his benefits.

O the lamentable condition of men of high desert, they have two most potent enemies, Envy and Feare, the one very hardly to be overcome, the other impossible, nay rather the victorie over the first makes the other the greater. Envy like a mountaine, if the waters of valour increase, is sometimes overwhelmed : but feare like a ship, the more they increase, the higher doth it rise. What must they doe then, that are so beset with impossibilities ? Let them couragiously make head against the obstacles of their good fortune, if where it is, and where not, let them give place to the evill. It is necessarie sometimes even

134 DAVID persecuted.

even in a storme to strive against the winde, if wee see the haven neere at hand, but if it be far off, it is better to strike saile and runne adrift than to make shipwrack. The most worthy when they are not the greatest, become the most in-fortunate : Valour can never clearly be discerned but only in a Prince : There, because it is profitable to the subjects, they reverence and feare it not,
and because it is an honour to them, they commend and envie it not. It is so faire a thing, that if those two monsters Feare and Envie, did not deforme it, men would even adore it, but haply God permitteth them to deforme it, lest it should be adored, because it is adored over much when it is not so deformed. If it be true that it is agreeable to nature, that the best should cōmand, it cannot bee contrary to Nature, that the better should be feared by him that doth command. If the eminency of vertue could bee laid aside, perhaps there would not some bee wanting, that to lead a quiet life would willingly reduce themselves to that mediocritie that might keepe them from contempt, and defend them from envie. But, as that eminencie is faire, and not easie to be acquired, so it is sometimes hurtfull, because it cannot be laid aside.

DAVID persecuted. 135

David receives the sword of the Giant Goliah from the Priest, and eats of the Shew-bread, because hee found

136 DAVID persecuted,

found no other sword for his defence, nor any other bread for his sustenance.

NEcessity enforceth him, the sometimes makes that lawfull which at all times is not so: It is a shield, which being ill used, workes the ruine of the world. All misdeeds, how hainous soever, doe withdraw themselves out of the danger of the Law, and instead of being condemned to be borne withal, are invested with the cloake of necessity: there is no absolute necessity in man, because he is a free agent; if he suffer no outward violence, hee hath none within him; those which wee call necessities, and which wee pretend that they free from the Law, are made to be such by the Law.

DAVID persecuted. 137

Law. They are necessary consequences by supposition, having a conditionall antecedent for their foundation : But the suppositions that are not authorized by the Law, have no consistence; for otherwise, all the actions of men should bee lawfull, seeing all might be necessary by supposing a conditionall antecedent before them, out of which a necessary consequence should arise by supposition. Therefore it is not true that necessity hath no Law, but it is very true that the necessity which hath no Law is onely that which is an enemy to the Law.

David

138 DAVID persecuted.

David flies to King Achish, but seeing himselfe and his vertues knowne, being much afraid of his envie, he faineth himselfe to bee mad, and changeth his countenance before him.

HE that is borne into this great Theatre of the world, ought to know how to suit himselfe into sundry habits, that hee may bee enabled in this Comedy to represent many persons. When a man sees himselfe persecuted by envy, hee must like the shelfish fructified by the dew of Heaven, cast away his pearle rather than bee a prey to those that have him in chase. David puts on a forme of madnesse, and by

DAVID persecuted. 139

it brings Achish to put off his envie. The countenance of the former is transformed before the eyes of the latter, not that the effigies of the one is altered, but the intellect of the other: If it had pleased the Lord by his mercy and benignity to root up envy out of the world, how many Dauids would change their countenances in the presence of Achish? But they that hate valor and vertue, let them (I beseech them) tell me what thing it is they thinke they hate, they hate even themselves. Vertue cannot bee odious; if it bee good, it is faire also; if it be faire, it is the object of love, and not of hatred. The envious is an ignorant Painter, or a malicious one; who in drawing the vertue of others de-

140 DAVID persecuted.

deformes it ; either he takes the perfections from it , or addes imperfections to it, and blames in another that which himselfe hath added of his owne to it, or what he hath taken from it. Yet this were not much, if he did not also expose that picture to publike view , that they who cannot see the originall, might hate it.

Take away David out of my presence, saith Achish: Have I any need of mad men ?

THIS King is one of those that when the time comes shall call themselves fooles, for having beleevd wisemen to be fooles : I know not which error

DAVID persecuted. 141

to bee the greater, either to thinke wise men to be fooles, or to account fooles to bee wise men: of this ignorance as out of a root arise all precipitated courses. The most dangerous person that is represented, and the greatest foole that can bee found, is he that takes upon him to be wise.

David departs thence, and saves himselfe in the cave of Adullam, where his brethren and all his fathers house come unto him.

AS a foraigne warre is the onely remedy to unite the disordinate minds in Common wealths, so are enmities and persecutions to make an at-tone-

tonement in families. This is a true rule when the discords are not bloody, and when proceeding no farther than to some high tearmes, they are not growne to hatred.

Those brethren that in a sort would have hindered the fortune of David, are they which now are willing to helpe him in his misery. Base mindes applaud our felicities, and abandon us in our disasters; but they that are onely corrupted by envy, retaining yet a kinde of generosity, when their envy rather springs from desire of honour, than malignity, they run readily to assist their allies in their dangers: and if they goe not to applaud them in their glory, it is not for that they desire not to see them great, but be-

DAVID persecuted. 143

because they themselves would gladly be great.

The malecontented also gathered together to David, and made him their Captaine.

IT is impossible but there should bee some such kinde of people in a State. If the Prince be good, then the evill are malecontent; if he be evill, the good are: and some that are not displeased with the Princes government, are so with their owne, by which being ruinated and wasted, when they have no hope in quiet courses, they affect nothing but turbulencies. The state ought to beware of 2. most potent enemies, Hope and De-

144. DAVID persecuted.

Despaire, for these two extremes are they that molest it, the greatest and the least of quality; the one supposing that their good fortune calleth them to a better estate: the other by their evill one are stirred to avoid the worst: for this cause I suppose was that City preferred by a profest politike Writer which is inhabited by the middle sort of men.

The Prophet Gad adviseth David to depart, & to go into the land of Iudah and Saul hearing that David was seene there, complaineth greatly amongst his servants, that David being not able to give them them vineyards nor houses, nor make them Commanders, nor otherwise reward them, should finde followers and he be abandoned.

DAVID persecuted. 145

Princes do erre when they thinke their Rebels should not be followed in hope of reward. I speake not of David who was a King and no Rebelle, one that was raised up, and not risen against his Prince; one that was flying from him, and not contending against him. The rewards expected of traitors are farre greater than those that are yeelded to fidelitie. And what doe not they promise, which promise that which is none of their owne? what doe they not give before they bee well advised that it is their owne? Disordinate minds are not content with ordinate rewards: their troublesome heads account quietnesse their enemy, and even those of a quiet disposition doe sometimes surfet of rest, because the natural desire of change makes felicity it selfe to be tedious.

G which

The Subjects serving their Prince, if they wil be rewarded oftentimes are driven to shew some excessive merit, because there are few that thinke themselves bound to those whose service is bound to them: but he that followes a rebell, hath already merited of him in that he followeth him. That false proposition, that to worke where one is obliged diminisheth his merit, is both pernicious to Princes, and prejudiciall to Subjects. The obligation rather increaseth the merit, seeing reward is due to the Subject, not onely for that which hee presently performeth, but for his future actions which hee hath obliged himselfe unto. The stranger that doth somewhat for the Princes service, gives him onely some fruit of his owne tree, whereas the Subject hath given him the tree it selfe with all the fruit.

DAVID persecuted. 147

G 2

Doeg

148 DAVID persecuted
Doeg the Idumean answereth Saul, that hee saw David when hee came to Achimelech the Priest who gave him besides victuals, the sword of Goliath; the King sends to call him, and questions him thereabout. Hee who the truth being knowne, expected reward rather than punishment, doth not excuse himselfe as not guilty, but speakes with the confidence which rather proceeds of innocency than temerity, saying, And who is among all thy Servants van

DAVID persecuted. 149

wants more faithfull than David the Kings sonne in law, and readier to doe all thy Commandements? neither is this the first time that I have prayed the Lord for him. Farre bee the name of a rebell from me. I thought I had done service to thee, in doing service to thy chiefe Favorite.

THe subjects of the Tyrant that hath an inward Favorite, are intangled in streights inextricable. Let them looke for ruine at all hands, if they hate him when he is exalted, or if they love him when he fal-

G 3 leth;

150 DAVID persecuted.

leth; yet what error doe they commit in loving him, but that their Lord doth the same? He cannot finde fault with others, unlesse he first condemne himselfe; and he deserves the greater chastisement, because hee ought to have greater advertisement, in considering who he is whom hee exalts above others. It is not the part of subjects to examine the actions of their Sovereigne: It is their glory to second them; and yet it is not sufficient to obey the commands of a Tyrant, if wee diue not also into his secret thoughts. Hee that seekes to search into them, makes himselfe (as it were) guilty of death; he that doth not, easily becomes liable. He embraces sometimes such a one as he could be content were were made away by his subjects; hee dissembleth for his proper interest, yet permits not others to doe so for theirs. If his thoughts were alwayes bent toward the prosperity of his people, hee were a wicked subject that did not bend himselfe wholly to his service.

DAVID persecuted. 151

Saul commands Achimelech and all the Priests of Nob, to be slaine.

Who have found elsewhere that the same proceeding which provoked Saul, had pacified a Tyrant, should wonder at the diversity of the effect, had it not beene produced by the innocency of David, who left Achimelech no place to de-

G 4. fend

152 DAVID persecuted.

send himsef without condemning the King, not onely of an oversight as it was in the other, but even of ingratitude, perfidiousnesse, and cruelty.

Saul saith, kill Achimelech and all the Priests, but no man stirreth; hee bids Doeg kill them, and hee presently obeyeth.

THE voice that commandeth in generall, proceedeth not with so much sharpnesse, as that which is directed to some particular. The dividing of it into so many eares, makes so many divisions, that it becomes diminished in every of them. The rewards as also the punishments which are in com-

DAVID persecuted. 153

common, come but slowly, but the private are as soon obtain'd, as they are deserved: Hee that would chastise generall errors, or would reward the merits of all, as those of some particulars are; on the one side hee would destroy the world, and the empty treasuries on the other: And therefore as in the great errors of a multitude, the proportio decupla is observed, so likewise in such great benefits, the like decimation is used, if not some greater proportion. Whence it comes that particulars are more easily wrought on to doe well, and with greater difficulty to doe evill the multitude, because their feare and hope of chastisement and reward is greater.

154 D A V I D persecuted.
Saul goeth afterward to Nob, where he killeth small and great, as well of the one sex as of the other, as well men as beasts.

IF that City had beene culpable, and David a rebell, Saul perhaps had taken no ill course, that being the first and onely place. That Prince is sometimes the most pious, which upon occasion is most severe: his cruelty is deepe, but not large, because if it be intensive, it is not extensive. It is true that where many Cities have rebelled, the using of greater in the first that is taken, doth not dishearten the rest, but makes them desperate and obstinate in their defence to their last breath. It is such

DAVID persecuted. 155

such an antidote as is not to be ministered to all that are diseased.

Abiathar a son of Achimelech escapeth out of Nob, and commeth to David, who afflicts him greatly; saying that he is the cause of the death of so many persons.

THIS is an intolerable passion, because three most potent affections are the procurers of this griefe, and inforce the revenge: The character of friendship melting the heart, the pricke of honour which enkindles it, and finally the interest which excites it. To defend
OUR

156 DAVID persecuted.

our friends is so profitable for the maintaining and increasing of Monarchies, that they which have beene held to bee most prudent have endeavoured it, even in places far remote from them, not to receive aid or service, but onely to helpe and succour them: hee that knoweth not how to make use of this rule, knoweth not how to rule. The greatest Rulers and Potentates of the world have made themselves great by this Art; yea this colour is so pleasing, that it dazleth the eyes of the people, and maketh them often applaud such a one, as under the colour of defending his friends, brings himselfe into the estates of others: but if hee finde great resistance there, seeing himselfe unable to offend those those whom he would have opposed, hee oppresseth them whom hee should have defended.

DAVID persecuted. 157

Word is brought unto David that the Philistims had invaded Keilah, and spoiled it: He asks counsell of the Lord, whether hee shall goe against them; who answers him, that he shall goe, overcome, and defeat them.

HE that will learne the way into matter of State, let him but observe David, let him not enterprize with fraud, but with valour: Let him not defile his hands with civill blood, but

158 DAVID persecuted.

but with that of the stranger ; nor offend those whom hee would have to bee his subjects, but defend them. It is true in-deede that most men grow great by fraud ; not because it is more safe than valour, but because it is more easie ; whence it comes that there are many fraudulent, but few that are valorous : notwithstanding the greater part even of those that by fraud have made themselves Masters, in seizing on the Country in which they were borne, have first manifested their valour either in enlarging or defending it. To defend the subjects of others, is to touch the finest string of State and Dominion ; if the Lord grieve at it, he seemes ungratefull ; if he suffer it and say nothing, he is

159 DAVID persecuted.

is in little safety. The Subjects are not to be defended by any, but their owne Prince : It is his proper office. He that arrogates it to himselfe, if hee bee not already, hee will be in the Princes roome. The wisest Common weales have not been ignorant how much this point importeth, declaring that they knew it for a matter of much consequence, and of maine importance, when they would not permit the Subjects themselves to bee the defenders of themselves.

Saul

160 D A V I D persecuted,
Saul understanding that David is in Keilah, prepares to goe and besiege him; which he foreseeing, causeth Abiathar to enquire of the Lord whether Saul will come or no, who answers he will. Then whether they of Keilah will deliver him into the hands of the King, and hee answers they will.

THe destruction of Nob had made the men of Keilah so ungratefull, as that they would have delivered him into the hands of his enemy, who had but at that instant delivered them out of the hands of their enemies.

DAVID persecuted. 161

enemies. Gratitude workes exceeding great effects in generous mindes, and the greater when it hath brought forth: It is then surely prevailing over private interest, yet must it of force give place unto feare, to which all the passions give way, I meane in State affaires, because none of them can be used when wee thinke our selves to bee thereby endangered, without which they cannot be exercised: It hath beene disputed whether the Prince or the people are more ungratefull. I am of opinion that there is ingratitude everywhere to be found, if our being gratefull cannot be without losse of our lives; yet rather in the people than in the Prince, because it is easier to finde one man than many, to sacri-

DAVID persecuted. 162

sacrifice his life to his reputation. But if the question bee of augmenting or diminishing the State, I hold Princes to bee the more ingratefull, because their interest is very great; and that of the people howsoever it bee in their entire body as great, is but small notwithstanding in every particular: whence it comes that men more easily part with a little, though in many it be much, than one man alone with much, which in many would be but little.

David

DAVID persecuted. 163

David departs into the desert of Ziph, to hide himselfe in the wood. Saul heares of it, and followes him in vain: But Jonathan goeth to him, comforts him, and saith, he is assured that he shall reigne over Israel.

See here the force of friendship, which makes Jonathan reioyce that David is to take the kingdome from him. Albeit that friendship seemeth to be without interest, yet is it not altogether without interest. The affection that we beare to our selves, is the rule of all our affections. They who have supposed that a friend loveth another more than himselfe, have haply

164 DAVID persecuted.

haply beene deceived, for if sometimes a man loseth his life, his goods and estate for his friend, it is not in regard that he wishes more good to another, than to himselfe, but because he acknowledgeth no other goods but vertues, which he gaineth, when gloriously for his friend hee forgot those of fortune. But they that love riches, their estate and their life above vertue, when they saw some forgoe their goods (which they so much esteemed) for their friend, were easily induced to thinke that they loved not themselves so much as their friend.

I was never of opinion that it was any imperfection, to love himselfe above others, but have rather esteemed it an imperfection

DAVID persecuted. 165

tion not to love himselfe more than others. He that erreth not in this, shall never offend; because he that sinneth, destroying God as much as he can, destroyeth himselfe, or as much as he may: seeing that all his good is depending on the goodnesse of God.

The Ziphines give notice to Saul that David had hid himselfe in their woods, and they conduct him where he is: David finds himselfe out of hope, seeing himselfe encompassed round about. But Saul is advertised by a messenger, that the army of

166 DAVID persecuted.
of the Philistims was entered into the land.

Sinners many times have no recourse unto God, but in their utmost extremity, and many times God delayeth the deliverance of the faithfull to prove them, and then hee heareth them: but those other are seldome delivered out of their dangers, but they returne efts-foones to their misdoings. He suffers them to returne thither whence their feare had withdrawne them, which departs as soon as he hath delivered them. To reserve himselfe from aiding his friends till they bee in extremity, is a thing well befitting in God, who can helpe whensoever hee will, and then willeth

DAVID persecuted. 167

willeth when it is best; but in men that have no power according to their will, it is perilous. When it moves not to distace, yet it diminisheth the obligation, and most commonly produceth ingratitude. There is a kinde of proceeding put in ure (yet not alwayes with good successe) by Potentates when they have received some disgust for the satisfying of two affections, their anger and their interest; to suffer those that have given them distaste, to be mortified, but not to bee opposed. This course is rather to be practised with enemies, and may prove well when the enmity proceeds not of emulation, if at least that act doe not lift him up to a higher spheare. It is a difficult thing for a corrivall not to be alwayes an enemy, when such emulation hath one degenerated into hatred: and when he ceaseth to be an enemy, hee will cease also to be a corrivall, either having passed into a further degree, or being so overpassed himselfe. Though Saul were more enraged against David, yet he leaves pursuing him to goe against the Philistims, with whom he hath more interest. Physitians doe sometimes not onely not assuage a grieve, but suffer it also to grow; whiles they cure, a putrid fever hapneth. Hee is very unwise, that for the healing of a part is carelesse of the whole, which when it dieth, the part dies with it.
to

168 DAVID persecuted.

David

DAVID persecuted. 169

David being retired into the holds of Engaddi, Saul returnes to pursue him even in rockie places, having vanquished the Philistims, and entering into a Cave for his necessary businesse, hee hapned into the same, in which David and his men were hid; where they perswade David to kill him, but hee is contented onely to cut off a lap of his garment.

TO kill the chiefe Commander of an army, if hee be gracious with it, when hee that killeth him hath not another army, is the revenge of a H private

170 DAVID persecuted.

private person to discharge his passion of hatred, but not of a Prince that desireth dominion. The army is thereby incensed, maketh presently another chief, thinkes to revenge the losse of their Prince, hateth the murtherer, and is more ready to die against him, than serve under him. David, who was in the way to the Kingdome by mansuetude and fortitude, accompanied with the feare of God, and by consequence a reverence toward his King, and humility withall, could forgoe those virtues, and take to him revenge with irreverence and cruelty, without losse of reputation. He that is come forward with one vertue, ought rather to die than to change it : there are some who having gotten reputation

by

DAVID persecuted. 171

by one manner of proceeding, cannot alter it, because it is naturall to them; others will not, because they have prospered with it; and those ought never to change, whose demeanour hath ever beene vertuous. That power which is rising, because it riseth cōmonly by the meanes of reputation, must beware of losing it, and preferre it even before life, for therewith all its good is lost. Politicians have esteemed this rule to be so true, that they have made it an universall one, and will have a Prince rather to hazard his estate and life, than to lose by meanes of Peace, Truce, or tribute his reputation. I subscribe not to their opinion, yet doe I agree, that if the greatnessse of a Prince consist in his

by

H 2

re-

172 DAVID persecuted.

reputation, hee ought rather to die than to lose it; but if it be founded on store of money and people which are his subjects, let him yeeld to the time, make peace and truce ever, though it bee with disadvantage of reputation; let him become tributary, though it be to an inferior nation, and leave not any thing undone how meane soever, (so it be not against Gods Law) rather than to adventure his estate; for any thing is better than to put that in jeopardy. If that be not lost, it is never out of season to recover whatsoever is lost: Its prudence in Princes and no infamy; they ought not to abhorre any thing that may augment or maintaine their dominion. Private men write such weake rules, because they measure sure

DAVID persecuted. 173

sure them by their owne compasse : Every degree of men hath his proper and peculiar kinde of reputation differing each from other, so farre forth that many things accounted infamous in one degree, are well reputed in another. A Prince that hath a great estate never loseth his reputation, if he lose not his estate, for his estate is his reputation. The world is in a confusion in such sort, that men of one degree leaping into that of others by confounding the divers degrees, have confounded all the world. The Merchant will take upon him the Gentleman, and the Gentleman the part of the Prince ; the religious, that of the souldier ; and where the reputation of the one consists in suffering and forgiving of injuries, hee leapes into that of the other, whiles he seekes to requite and revenge. I am to be excused if I am long in this matter, which is the cause of great errours in the world ; for if every one would follow his owne profession, it would soone be knowne that reputation consists in knowing well how to performe his owne profession.

174 DAVID persecuted.

David being on one side of a mountaine, seeing Saul on the other, calleth unto him and sheweth him his garment, assuring him of his good will, complaineth that he is persecuted, but blameth the Kings Ministers,

DAVID persecuted. 175

nisters, and not the King himselſe. Saul hearing that malice is imputed to his ſervants, doth not ex-cuſe himſelſe by them, but layeth the fault on him-ſelſe.

IT is an ordinary thing of male-contented men to complain, though not of the Prince himselſe, yet of his Miniſters.
That which David doth here out of modeſty, is done often by others out of ſubtilty. To riſe againſt the government, makes the name of a rebellion the leſſe odious, deceives the people, yea, many times, the Princes themſelves for a while, who ſometimes diſcerne not at

176 DAVID persecuted.

the first the ambition that cometh masked under discontentment. Princes ought therefore to have their Ministers about them of singular goodnesse, and of tried prudence, that upon the first rumor they may be well assured of the falsehood of such complaints, and breake the heads of such horrible Serpents at their first appearing. The reverence that the people beare toward the Prince is so great, that it would be a difficult thing to stirre them up against him, but by first beguiling them; and though it bee all one to rise against the government, and to rebell against the Prince, (because either the Prince is hee that governeth, or hee that governes is the Princes Minister) yet it appeares not at first with so

DAVID persecuted. 177

so foule a face. It is true indeed that an insurrection of the people is occasioned by a bad Minister, in which case the Prince doth alwayes amisse to chastise him. In the people there is not alwayes one desire covered under another, but if the great ones arise against the government, it is not because they are not well governed, but because they would be governors themselves; to satisfie their demands were to consent to lose the Sovereignty, seeing such will not bee satisfied, till they obtaine it.

H 5 Samuel

178 D A V I D persecuted.
Samuel dieth, hee is buried with honour, and is by the people most tenderly bewailed.

I Know not whether mourning for the dead proceedeth of piety, or of meere interest: It may favour peradventure of piety to bewaile when hee dieth, but not after hee is dead: who would not have compassion of his friend, while he sees him, or imagines tormented with the grievous agonies of death. Men are certainly in very great paine, for they are in the paine due to a very great fault: And who would not after rejoyce to see him departed victorious over humane frailty, and to triumph over death death it selfe, without having left any other spoyle in that conflict than his body, and that for a very short time?

DAVID persecuted. 179

To lament the dead (if one may say) is then most impious, when it seemes most pious: and then ought most to bee done, when it seemes not due at all. The death of the righteous, at which wee ought to rejoyce, makes us to mourne; and that of the wicked, which we ought most to lament, doth rejoyce us. It is no friendly but an envious part to be grieved at the death of that friend, whose life may make us beleeve that he enjoys his deserved glory. But it is a part of piety to be sory at their death, whose wickednesse doth make us doubt that they are cast headlong into hell.

The

180 D A V I D persecuted.

The world is so full of snares that the good should not desire to bee in it, because there they may be corrupted; and so great is the mercy of the Lord our God, that the wicked should desire to bee therein, that they may be amended. But if we are grieved in regard of our owne interest, is it not more available that our friends pray to God for us, than to men? He that thinkes he hath lost his friend when he dieth, if he beleeeve the immortality of the soule, and doth not thinke him damned, must then beleeeve that the Characters of his vertues are lost with God. O how true it is that all our errors doe spring and grow from our muddy senses! They acknowledge no interest but earthly, no happinesse but worldly;
and

DAVID persecuted. 181

and albeit man is elevated by his better part unto a more excellent knowledge, yet he cannot desire it as hee ought, because he cannot know it as it is.

David went unto the wilderness of Raahan, and understanding that there dwelt neere thereabout a man exceeding rich in flockes and other possessions, whose name was Nabal; he sent unto him on the day of sheep-shearing, to demand some reliefe of provision and victuals: But Nabal not onely denieth him, but with ill words provoking him,

182 DAVID persecuted.
him, declaring his avarice, to bee accompanied with malice.

IT is an ordinary thing in denying of benefits to accompany the deniall with injuries; I know not whether it bee to cloake their avarice with hate, or because such men loving their goods as deerely as their lives, when one demãds to have any of them, are incensed with anger, as if he sought so much of their blood; or elsthat it comes to passe, because men in denying what is demanded, thinke they have made him their enemy that demanded it, and framing him such in their imaginations, speake of him not as one that is become such, but as
of

DAVID persecuted. 183

of one that is so already. Peradventure also Nabal denies with arrogancy to accomplish David's desire, doubting his guiltinesse might seeme to bee some signe that hee stood in feare of violence, and to shew that hee doth not feare it, himselfe in termes begins to use it.

David is incensed by the answer of Nabal, and sets forward to destroy him and all his house. But Abigail, Nabals wife, being a prudent and a beautifull woman, hearing of Davids request, and her husbands deniall, goes with many beasts laden with victuals

184 DAVID persecuted, victuals to meet David, and beginneth with excuse of her husbands ignorance, and foolishnesse. Shee entreates him to accept of the present shee brought, and pardon her husband: And so David is appeased.

WOmen are of so great force in perswading, that it hath beene held all one to hearken to them, and to grant their requests. He that forbade them to bee brought up in learning, had an eye perhaps not onely to their difficulty of understanding, but also to their facility in perswading. He that was judged by the Lord God to be the wisest, made use of such an

DAVID persecuted. 185

an instrument; and that tyrant who was written among the most circumspect, was afraid of this force. Women have alwayes delight joined with their words, and where delight is, there is also perswasion. If the understanding doth not agree to it, the will consents: so that when that which they say cannot be believed, yet they which have said it must not be displeased. Their teares are their Enthymems, their beauty is their sword: where they doe not procure love, there they move compassion; yea, and sometimes they perswade the better, because they have no skill in perswading: There is no cunning suspected where there is no science, yet there is more thereof in their countenance than in all Rhetor-

186 DAVID persecuted.

Rhetoricke. It is lawfull to forgoe all fiercenesse in favour of a sex that is so amorous : The weaknesse of it makes us not ashamed to lay downe all our wrath to it, yea, rather makes him ashamed that doth not lay it downe.

David doth blesse God and Abigail, for having by her prudence diverted him from revenging himselfe of Nabal.

IT is a great good hap to bee taken off from a necessity of revenging himselfe. Hee that can divert it and doth not, deserveth great blame; hee that hindreth it, great commendation; and hee meriteth more
that

DAVID persecuted. 187

that desireth to be so diverted. But there are many now a dayes desirous of such necessities, which if they be but small, they seeke to augment them, and faine some when they finde none. They account it a glory to revenge, and the name of revengefull, glorious. This is a proper art for those who having no talents by which they make themselves knowne to be men, will make themselves knowne to be beasts; they know not how to make themselves honoured, therefore they will make themselves feared, as if reputation and feare were all one. The vulgar rout breede such kinde of people by applauding them, but such applauses turne to their ruines, seeing the quarrels which beginne among
the

188 DAVID persecuted.

the greater sort are for the most part quenched with the blood of the meaner. Cities will never be rid of these blood-thirsty companions, till they cease from commending their bloody proceedings, neither will the way to such false praise ever bee stopped up, till the way to the true, shall be laid open; which then onely will be effected, when Princes and States give place and occasion to their Subjects to make knowne their true valour, and reward them according to their due deservings.

Abigail

DAVID persecuted. 189

Abigail returnes to Nabal, and because she findes him drunken, she forbeares till the morning to speake unto him, and then tells him what had passed; which when hee had heard, his heart was dead within him as a stone, and within few dayes he dies.

WHY should Nabals heart become dead, seeing his offence was pardoned? or rather why should not his heart be dead, seeing hee had offended? David doth not cast him downe, it is only his owne conscience. Hee that offends his neighbour unjustly offends his owne

190 D A V I D persecuted.

owne reason, and although his neighbour hath pardoned him, she never pardons him: the revenge taken of him, is the remembrance of his offences. Nabal cannot beleeve that revenge to be abolished, whose characters being blotted out the memory of men, are written in heaven; for then are they written there, when they are stricke out here. He doth not perfectly pardon, who doth not pray God to pardon; which if he doe, he doth not thereby diminish the offences, but in some sort increaseth them. If the Judges, whom the Holy Ghost calleth gods, did resemble God in punishing of sinnes, as they desire to bee like God in superiority above others, there would not be so much offending, and there would

DAVID persecuted. 191

would be more pardoning. A man hath no sooner forgiven an offence, but the Judge also pardons it ; yea, sometimes also the Judge hath absolved before the party hath pardoned. That savage fiercenesse of never pardoning an enemy would soone be abolished, if their pardoning did augment the offences in the judiciary seats of men, as it doth in a sort before the Tribunall or high Justice of God. But when the offended pardoneth, the offences are written above, though here being remitted they are cancelled.

David

192 DAVID persecuted.

David taketh Abigail being a woman of singular beauty and prudence to wife, and Saul gives his daughter, who was first the wife of David, unto Phalti.

WHo desires to marry to Beauty, may happe to meete with a Devill: for the Devill also hath some beauty.
But he that desires to be joyned with Prudence, if he marry not an Angell, yet he is surely married to an angelicall vertue.
Prudence is a fire which converts all Antimony into medicine, makes her pleasing that's deform'd, makes her tolerated that is poore, and her quietly enjoyed that is faire: for it is a Bezar

DAVID persecuted. 193

Bezar that corrects the venome of beauty ; It makes it maje-sticall, and not lascivious, and being majesticall it is the daughter of the radiant beames of Ju- piter, not of Venus ; rather enforcing reverence, than enflaming desire. He that sees her, conceits her a thing impossible to obtaine, and she will never fixeth upon impossibilities ; if it be not fixed it reflects on the object, if it doe not reflect, it loves not, for the often reflections are the producers of love.

I The

194 DAVID persecuted.
The Ziphims go to Saul, and advertise him that David is in their desarts, and hee goes to seeke him with 3000. chosen souldiers.

SEe how the pride of Saul is not mitigated with the humility of David, perhaps because the pride was joyned with interest, and the humility with reputation. The proud man becomes meeke, not when his enemy hath humbled himselfe, but when hee himselfe hath humbled him. That humility that is begotten by feare, doth ever mitigate the pride that is not brutish: hee that beleeveth otherwise might haply have beene deceiued, by confounding the one with interest, and
the

DAVID persecuted. 195

the other with greatnesse of minde. The proud man will have his enemy bow unto him; but if then when hee boweth downe, his deeds lift him up, he doth not mitigate, but rather exasperate him, because instead of magnifying him, he doth afflict and confound him. All the wise, yea, and wily men doe humble themselves to him that persecutes them; when their humility encreaseth their reputation, which it alwayes doth, when seperated from debilitie. The greatest pride that may be found, goes clad in the habit of humility; and oftentimes is not discerned by others, but himselfe onely against whom it is employed; and because by the rest it is not discovered, they cannot oppose against it without being blamed.

196 DAVID persecuted.

David being enformed of Sauls arrivall, and having gotten some knowledge of his strength, calls unto him Achimelech and A-bishaï; asks them who will goe with mee into the army of Saul, and Abishai answers, I will goe.

WHen Princes conferre a degree of honour on a subject, they will make choice themselves; but in a matter of danger, they use to leave him to his owne choice: and whercas the subject thinkes to make his merit the greater, by how much it is the more voluntary; the Prince on the cōtrary sometimes holds himselfe lesse obliged

DAVID persecuted. 197

ged to him whom he hath least obliged. I blame not this proceeding, so it bee not of purpose to avoid to bee beholding, but to bee assured of the sufficiency and love of the subject. To expose him to danger and to love him, doe not very well agree. To make one to offer himselfe in a voluntary manner, is not sufficient argument of such affection, if without much entreatie his offer bee accepted.

I 3 David

198 DAVID persecuted.

David and Abishai goe to the campe of Saul, where they finde the Guard, the King himselfe, and all his souldiers asleepe.

THe Lord God ordinarily in the effects of the world suffers his hand to bee seene of them only that are very sharpe fighted, because hee workes by naturall instruments; yet sometimes also he will be seene even of those that are blinde, because he workes by the supernaturall arme of his Omnipotency.
When there are operations perceived to be contrary to the ordinary course, that the watch-full are found sleeping, that the prudent are overseene, that the valiant are faint hearted ; there they

DAVID persecuted. 199

they that are well fighted may discerne the hidden finger of God, who when hee intendeth the ruine of some house or kingdome, or any other place, takes from it those that might save it; or otherwise alters them in such sort, that they oppose not his designs: sometimes also taking away the marke of naturall things, hee sends an Angell to burne Cities, to destroy Armies, and raiseth up Captaines, that with the light of a torch or a lampe make Cities fall downe; and then there is no eye so blinde, but seeth therein the Almighty hand of God.

I. 4. Abisshai

200 DAVID persecuted.

Abishai would have slaine Saul, David would not permit him, but takes away his speare and his pot of water.

WHo will wonder at David, that having beene as a Lion when hee slew the Giant Goliath, he now shewes himselfe a lambe in suffering Saul to live, if he were a figure of that God, who to the sinner was a Lambe, and a Lion to the Devill. He that aimeth at a dignity, in shewing himselfe faint-hearted in obtaining it, will not prove couragious when he hath obtained it. David did not forbear to slay Saul for any reason of State, but abstained from it for the reverence and feare of
of

DAVID persecuted. 201

of God. Where hath that man beene found, that knew this peece of policy at any time? It is too finely wrought to be dis-discerned by the eyes of those that are blinded with the passions of desire to rule or revenge, untill having obtained the dominion or the revenge they desired, their eyes happily are cleered; then they begin to consider that which they should have considered before, they are afraid of the example which themselves have begotten; whence it came to passe that many have revenged the death of those Princes, of which themselves have beene the procurers. They are terrified in their seat of State, they hate their Scepter, as if it threatned violent death to him that treads

202 D A V I D persecuted. on it or hold it : They stand in feare of the stars that rule over that kingdome, as if the vanity of those were true, as it is most false; who have beleevd that the violent constellations of kingdomes, with a very little helpe of the Kings Horoscope had the power to kill them.

David calleth out to Abner, and reprooves him for not having kept the King duly.

I Know not whether this were good policy to provoke the Generall of the army, but I know that Abner after the death of Saul, was he that made all the warre against David.

He

DAVID persecuted. 203.

He complaines againe to Saul of his being persecuted, saying, if God hath stirred thee up against me, let him bee appeased with sacrifice; if men have done it, accursed bee they of God.

HE speakes not of appealing men, he knowes that malignity may be extinguished, but never appeased, and that no other sacrifice doth extinguish it, but the suffering of himselfe to be extinct. He that practiseth malignity is base, he that gives eare to it is weake, 'tis not the part of a prudent or a wary man: It is a sword that is sharpe on every side, one cannot strike with

with it, but is wounded himselfe : hee is irkesome to those that heare him, among whom while he seekes to endamage another, hee loseth his owne reputation, but yet he is hearkened to; and why they hearken to him, and how this is wrought I know not, neither will I teach nor learne it : For I hold the profession so infamous, that if I did contemplate the means of the practice thereof, I should accuse my selfe to bee guilty in the tribunall of detraction. To teach others how to bee malicious, is a great malignity, and would bee a great madnesse in me: I should sharpen that sword that hath wounded mee so oft, and should make my selfe master of a profession which I never practised but passively.

Saul

DAVID persecuted. 205

Saul confesseth againe that he hath sinned, and prayeth David to returne, who answers; Let one come to fetch the Kings speare; but speakes not of his returning.

THe great favorites of Princes, if they once fall, they fall headlong, they are gone, they cānot up againe. The cause that shall separate them from their Lord must needs be great, there is no returning. The ordinary middle siz'd Courtiers, may sometimes fall and sometimes rise. The Angell fell, and so did man, but the man returned into grace, and not the Angell; because the nature of man was

206 DAVID persecuted.

was not so great a favorit, as was that of the angell. If a prince be but simply angry with his favorite, so that his anger doth not end in discharging and turning him away, it is a signe of love. We are very angry with them, whom we love entirely. It is a security of being a favorite, because the anger which may be vented when it is not kept in by feare, is entertained by love, and is finally a confirmation of the inward affection; being (as one may say) a certaine venting of matters, which being kept in the Princes breast would ruine the Courtier, and uttered with choler, they call backe the love to his beginning, which according to the property of all humane things receiveth satiety and corruption in time.

David

DAVID persecuted. 207

David saith in his heart, I shall one day fall into the hands of Saul: It is better for mee to goe into the land of the Philistims.

HE that hath need of fortune for his preservation, let him be well' assured that she is not alwayes helpfull, let him withdraw himselfe out of danger: because he had her on his side, let him looke to have her against him, and conclude that the longer she hath lasted, the soner his end will come. This is a precept which one shall rather finde written than observed; perhaps because the nature of men which is in their disasters to complaine of fortune, in their good successe to boast of their

208 D A V I D persecuted.

their owne worth doth not permit them to bee afraid of being abādoned of those helps, which they know not how or whence they obtained : so that the vowes which are hanged up in the Temple of Fortune, are more to pacifie her, than to bee thankfull to her. He therefore that of necessity to maintaine himselfe in state, is driven either to the helpe of Fortune, or his best skill and cunning; let him live alwaies in feare, for in the end the instability of the one, and the deceitfulnes of the other, will let him fall into the hands of Saul. That Monarchy or Common-weale is not stable which is not founded on forces, lawes, and ordinances of their owne. That clocke which hath no Gnomon, and which receiveth veth its motion either from springs or counterpoises cannot long endure without erring.

DAVID persecuted. 209

David with his men goe to Achish, the King of Seth, which when Saul understood, he left off pursuing him.

IT seemes lawfull to flie among the pagans when there is no other way to save himselfe, so that he live not like a Pagan; and hee is not alwayes to bee blamed, that hath recourse to their helpe for the recovery or defence of his owne estate. It hath beene sometimes also permitted to helpe them against other pagans, so the helpe wee yeeld

210 DAVID persecuted.

yeeld them be in favour of reason and right. But it shall bee alwayes recorded for a great fault to succour, to encourage, to move or to counsell the idolaters to an invasion of the states of true beleevers, for that were not to goe against men, but against God, to lessen his kingdome, and to enlarge the confines of the Devill.

David saith unto Achish, I am not worthy to dwell in the head City with thee. Appoint me, I beseech thee some other place: then Achish assigned him Ziklag.

David

DAVID persecuted. 211

David withdrawes himselfe from the Court of King Achish; not because Courts are to be forsaken, but hee retires himselfe, because his different religion and great valour, would have made him suspected and feared. I am not of their mind that blame and condemne the Court, it is the true Paragon of vertuous men: there is no place where vice is soner discovered, and vertue more rewarded. It is a light by which mens hearts are scene and discerned, yea, it is a most cleare test to distinguish naturall gold from that of Alchimie. He that hath great talents let him hasten thither, for there they are gloriously spent and employed. Let him not regard the complaints of those whose talents, how

212 DAVID persecuted.

how great soever they have beene, have not advanced them.
 It may perhaps be found, if they were examined, that they were not printed with the stampe of prudence, and so of no value, because he that had them could not utter them, or because hee would have them goe for more than they were worth. He that excels in any art or science, if hee have not withall some eminent place in Court, hee complaines that vertues are not regarded. Princes for the most part both esteeme and reward all men according to the great-nesse of their quality, not of their ambition : and if any one complaine, it is thought he hath more of that than of the other.
 A great part of the errors in the world ariseth hence, not because every

DAVID persecuted. 243

every one doth not give place to his better, but because every one doth not know his better; and indeed, it is a difficult thing to know him, because hee goes not alwayes clad in the same cloth. Men deceive themselves in equivocating from a greatnesse, with an addition to an absolute greatnesse; beleeving oftentimes, because they are esteemed the best in some one thing, that therefore they should bee the best esteemed. He onely in regard hee is the greatest in his profession, shall be in great repute above others, whose profession shall be in estimation above others.

David

214 D A V I D persecuted.

David with his men goes forth of the Citie to spoyle and destroy certaine idolatrous countries, and returning to Achish, makes him beleewe that hee hath beene to endamage the Israelites; and the King thereupon is perswaded that he might assure himselfe of David, beleewed that he had so farre provoked the Israelites, that he could no more be reconciled.

MAny Princes when they were growne jealous of the fidelity of a subject, have used

DAVID persecuted. . 215

used the like meanes to be secured of him, and the chiefeſt among rebels doe commonly ground their hopes in putting thoſe that follow them in deſpaire. Yet all ſuch rampiers are very weake, and eaſily overthrowne, as ſoone as aſſaulted with the engine of reaſon and ſtate. It facilitateth pardons, makes offences to bee forgotten, and overcomes all deſires, becauſe the deſire of dominion, is the firſt begotten and eldeſt of all the affections. The Princes that are wary and circumſpect, doe thinke themſelves onely aſſured of that faith which is either enforced, or intereſſed.

The

216 D A V I D persecuted.

The Philistines prepare a great army to goe against Saul. Achish inviteth David to goe with him, and he accepts of his invitation.

I Would not that this place should serve for any example to any Christian Princes, to accompany any Infidels in oppressing the faithfull: Hee had no thought of bringing the Philistims into the Land of Israel, but he was brought into the possession of that kingdome by Achish, unto which God had elected him. The Philistims went not to fight against the kingdome, but against the King; as was cleerely seene, when after the the overthrow given to Saul, they returned to their owne houses, leaving Mephibosheth to rule and reigne in Israel.

DAVID persecuted. 217

The Philistines pitch their tents in Shunem, and Saul with his army in Gilboa. Saul had all the Magicians and South-sayers that had spirits in their belly to be slaine: perhaps they had given out that the kingdome should come into the hands of David. But he staid not long from seeking out the reliques of those whom he had so persecuted: for being afraid K when

218 DAVID persecuted.

when he had seene the host of the Philistims, he asked counsell thereupon of the Lord, and when hee could have no answer, makes recourse to the De-vill.

IT was said by a Politician, that Diviners are a sort of men deceiving those that have hope in them, unfaithfull to those that command; which should alwayes be prohibited, and ever retained in his Citty.
But how should they be forbidden, and yet retained? only because that they that did so prohibit them, were the same that also retained them. There were two sorts of professors in time past

DAVID persecuted. 219

past running the same fortune among Princes. The cunning poysoners, and the fortune tellers: they kept still th'one sort that they might poyson others, and sometimes did banish them that they might not bee poysoned by them themselves. To th'other, they ran to know the nativities of great persons: the Princes belike thinking by violence to enforce the senses, if at any time they should raise up a subject to reigne; yet they droue them away againe, lest others in the Princes nativity should seeke out the time of his death, or should seeke the rather to procure it, supposing heaven and the starres to be favourable to it.

220 D A V I D persecuted.
Saul therefore disguised with two in his company, goeth to a woman having a familiar spirit; shee refuseth and excuseth her art, for feare of the king; but Saul swearing that no harme should come unto her, shee by her skill raiseth up Samuel, as Saul had requested; who (were it either an illusion or a vision) cleere it is, that being questioned by Saul, tels him what was to come.

TO seeke to know things to come by meanes of the devill, is a great error: to seeke it
by

DAVID persecuted. 221

by the stars, is sure a greater arrogancy; by this men pretend a science, by th'other a revelation.

The one wee may yet know by the permissive will of God, but the other passeth our understanding; and hee that thinkes by this meanes to know what is to come, pretends also to be God, for God onely knoweth the future without any revelatiō: But perhaps there is no other difference betwixt these professions, (setting aside the odiousnesse of the name) saving that in the one, men run voluntarily to the devill; in the other, ignorantly.

Who knowes that those Astrologicall figures, are not as the circles of Negromacers, & that those same signes, and those starres have not a proportion correspondent with their characters, by meanes of which, they bring the devill sometimes to foretell what is to come, but ever to deceive them? And if perchance the devill is he that doth by such arts reveale it, why doe they seeke unto him? If to get evill, it is a meere madnes; if to get some good, it is to much simplicity to beleieve that the devill will bee a minister of any good.

K 3 racters,

222 DAVID persecuted.

Samuel saith unto Saul, that he, and his sons, and a part of the people shall die in battell, because he fulfilled not the will of God in the victory against the Amalekites.

The

THe Prince is often the occasion of the finnes of the people, and the people of those of the Prince; the one in permitting, the other in applauding them. Sometimes also God chasteneth the people for the Princes finnes, not because it hath demerited with them, but because it hath so deserved. It is true indeed that when his Divine Majesty sends the sicke of chastisement, it cuts downe the good as well as the bad; because that which hee sends into the world, is not the same which doth sever the wheat from the darnell.

224 DAVID persecuted.

Saul fainteth at the hearing of such bitter newes, and afterward by the intreaty of the woman, with the perswasion of his servants, having eaten somewhat, returneth to his armie.

Here are seene two contrary effects in one selfe subject, faintnesse, and fortitude; Saul seemeth to faint, when his heart failed at the hearing of his death foretold: Againe, hee seemes valiant when he returns to his Army, in which hee knowes that the next day hee shall die. But haply feares may be like unto loves: as the security of enjoying a thing that is desired, desired, doth diminish the desire, so the assurance of falling into a thing that we feared, diminisheth the feare of it. Sauls blood within him made some sudden motion at that unexpected blow; but hee afterward reflecting on it with his understanding, and imagining death as already present, hee discharged his feare, but hath nothing to doe with any other time, but with the future.

DAVID persecuted. 225

K 5 The

226 D A V I D persecuted.

The armies gather together, that of the Philistines in Aphek, the other of the Israelites in Israel; but the Princes of the Philistines seeing David with Achish, advised him to send him away, because he could no way better than with their heads regain the favour of his king.

INterest is of such force with men in their operations, that it is accounted weaknesse to trust him, whose interest may move him to betray us. Sincere and plaine dealing hath nothing to doe in this case in matters of policy: who so presupposeth it in any,

DAVID persecuted. 227

any, is sometimes deceived; and because he is sometimes deceived, he doth never presuppose it. It cannot be beleevved without making some errour in policy, or without some errour already made. Hee that makes use of it after long experience doth not erre, yet erred then when he made experience of it.

Achish although David had not beene with him above six moneths, saith that he had beene with him some yeers, to make it beleevved that if he had beene evill, hee should have knowne him.

IT is not altogether impossible to refraine nature a long time, time, but it is so in the utmost confines of possibility. There is requisite thereunto a perpetuall assistance of judgement; nature is alwayes ready to move according to her inclination, if shee bee not alwayes with-held: and if through headlesnesse or wearinesse she bee left unto her selfe, shee falls like a stone to her owne center. Herehence comes that little truth which is found in Astrologically predictions, or rather which wee make them have; because our inclination is a mover that continually worketh in us, and doth not alwaies finde a continuall resistance. That which is violent is said to bee of little continuance, not onely for the necessity in him that useth the violence to bee alwayes working; but also because because he is therewith so wearied, that either wearinesse or satiety makes him to cease.

DAVID persecuted. 229

David seemes to bee grieved that Achish will not take him with him, not knowing that hee hath given him any occasion to the contrary: Achish answers that in his eies he is an Angell of God, but the Princes of the army are not pleased in him.

LOe here a means how one may lose his inward familiarity with a Prince, and get not his favour. The conspiracy of great ones where they beare great sway, undoubtedly either doth doth ruine the favorite, or trouble the state, whensoever hee that is greatest with the Prince, is not the greatest among them. In such a case men would not bee ashamed to bow unto him, to whom though hee were not the favorite, he ought to bow: and there would be opened unto them a cleere way without any dirty flattery, or thorny danger, to run a happy course betweene obsequiousnesse, and odious liberty; but this seldome or never happens: whether by the cunning of Princes, or by nature, I know not. This Art teacheth them that the greatest in the state may not be called into inward favour without danger of dominion, from which hee is but one pace distant. Nature teacheth to lift up

DAVID persecuted. 231

up the lowly, and to beat down the mighty: and this nature is dictated of God, who raiseth the poore from the dunghill to place him among Princes, even with the Princes of his people: It is signified by the starres, whose radiation is the thought to be great, powerfull, and glorious; which lifting men from low estate, doth seat them with Princes. It is finally manifested in the earth, whiles it favourably cherisheth and raiseth up those plants that are not wrapt in gold, that is resplendent, but buried in the baseness of the soile that is uncleane. What instruction may then be given to favorites for eschewing the hatred of great ones? The wittiest politician seems to commend such a subject, as contenting himselfe selfe to bee the greatest of the great ones in authority about the Princes, cared not to exceed the meaner ones in dignity : I take this to bee want of knowledge, how to make ones best benefit of the fortunes that befall one, or rather an abusing of them : and that it is no way sufficient to extirpate envy, which is rooted in favour, and not in honour. How many have beene seene to lose their favours with the Prince, retaining still their dignity ; and of objects of envy to become the objects of compassion. He that thinkes riches and honours are envied, is deceived : It is the command, the applause, and obsequiousnesse, that they bring with them : if these were separated from the King, it were no desirable thing to be a King. A very small reverence, and a very little place, is sufficient to satisfie what our bodies require : but the whole world is not enough to quench the thirst of the minde ; which stands also with reason, because the body may easily finde his object in a bodily world. But the minde which is a spirit, never findes it where there is no spirit. It deceives it selfe sometimes in running with the body after some bodily thing, as toward a proper object ; but no sooner is the same obtained, but the errour is discovered. Those pleasing tastes which some altogether sensuall doe account but as smoake, which are the obsequiousnes, the reverences, the applauses, these are the greatest food to the minde, because these

to

DAVID persecuted. 233

234 DAVID persecuted.

these are the least corporeall.

There are a thousand other precepts written for favourites, both to defend them from the hatred of the great, and from every other occasion that might worke their overthrow. Some also I could adde which are not mentioned by others, but because they are all vaine and frivolous, I will not fill up the page with such vanities and weakneses: I will say one only thing, being the truest and securest course to maintaine himselfe in the Princes favour, which may well be performed, and may well be spoken of; yet can it not be learnd nor taught, which is, to preserve alwaies the love of the Prince, and the manner how to preserve it. It is true, that the favourite never falls

DAVID persecuted. 235

falls without some cause, but the same causes have not alway the same effects : for sometimes they are surmounted by an affection greater than their owne ; if this stands firme and sure, there can bee no danger ; if this shrinkes, then the ruine is at hand: not because he falls without cause, but because 'tis impossible not to give some cause, and then the lesser have more force than at another time the greater would. A constellation which would scarce have caused a simple tertian in youth (by consent of those that wrire these vanities in Astrology) is sufficient to kill one in his decrepit age. He that would not have his love decline, let him hold both his eyes alwayes fixed upon the Prince, never depart

236 DAVID persecuted.

part from him, never seeke any other but him; for as soone as he turnes his eyes to himfelfe or others, he is undone. His greatnesse, his affections, his pleasures, and delights, must be in his Prince. Neither let him thinke that by this meanes hee may misse of preferments, but rather that hee shall bee sure of them, and peradventure with lesse envy. Hee that possesseth things that are subject to envy, and takes no delight in them, is rather to be pittied, than envied. But who is he that will doe so, saving the man that is full of affection, and most tenderly enamoured of his Lord. It is a thing that cannot bee reduced into Art, though it bee easily knowne. Affectation differs much from affection, which if he

DAVID persecuted. 237

hee hath not, let him not imitate; for such imitations are odious in the schoole of love: they that will maintaine themselves in the Princes favour with Art, their Art failes them, and they then faile with their Art.

David departs from the army, and returnes with his men to Ziklag, whereby they finde that the Amalekites have burnt the City, and carried away all the inhabitants prisoners, with Davids wives also; and the people therewith enraged, would have stoned him.

It

238 D A V I D persecuted.

IT is no marvell that this multitude would have stoned innocent David: men being angry, seeke some subject on which they may discharge their passion; yet if they finde not those that offend them, they suppose whomsoever they meet to be the same; yea, and sometimes when there appears before them no other, on which they may revenge themselves, they beat the pavement with their feet, and the walls with their fists. And this is no such folly as many doe imagine, but an instinct of nature; which feeling the heart suffocated by so great a quantity of fiery spirits, seekes to ease her selfe by diverting some part of them in the exercising of some action.

The passions of the people are

DAVID persecuted. 239

are too distemperate going alwayes to extremes, which is not proper to the people, as they are a people, but as they are a multitude; in which every one hath his particular passion, and participateth also with that of the others, and with that participation increaseth his owne. I have sometimes doubted, (but I say it is not a thing undoubted) that in this increasing the contracting at least of the spirits hath some part : considering that a multitude of people gathered together, findes nothing to stay it from going whither it may goe without separating, and whither they would not goe with lesse danger if they were separated : from whence may bee taken an instruction for them that wil fortifie

240 DAVID persecuted.

tifie themselves in a place that they have regard to accommodate in such manner, that the fortification it selfe may be able to withstand the incursion of a multitude; or otherwise, not thinke their strength sufficient to maintaine it with neither fire nor shot.

David askes counsell of the Lord thereupon what shall bee done, and suddenly turnes to follow the steps of the Amalekites.

THIS is the best way to withdraw himselfe out of danger, to divert an angry multitude to the true object of their anger, that thereby they may forsake the false.

They

DAVID persecuted. 241

They finally finde out the Amalekites, fight with them, and overcome them; recovering the prey with the prisoners: and the spoile which they had taken, David will have divided with those that kept the baggage, and were not at the fight.

THe Captaine of a male-contented company, had need bee both valorous, and circumspect: That heat that stirres up a multitude, whether for love to their leader, or anger against their Prince, groweth soone cold, and then gives place to a comparison, to which succedeth repentance; the consequence

242 DAVID persecuted.

quence whereof, is either the killing of their Captaine, or the abandoning of him: Neither is it sufficient for the eschewing of such a danger, to have once gotten a great reputation: time consumeth it, and how great soever it be, reduceth it to nothing. It is necessary to linke it into a chaine, not suffering the report of a great action to cease, without renewing it with another as great or greater. David because his flying from Saul might take from him the reputation hee had gotten in subduing the Giant, no sooner begins to flie, but hee fights and overcomes the Philistines, that had sacked Keilah; and because that flight is an argument of feare, and that feare brings a losse of reputation, he makes it knowne
that

DAVID persecuted. 243

that he could twice have killed the King, to give his flight the title of reverence, and to take away the imputation of feare. Afterward being returned to Ziklag, that the malecontented might not have leisure to make any reflections on him to his harme; and desirous to maintaine his reputation, hee oftentimes with honour and profit to himselfe assaulteth the infidels; and finally vanquisheth the Amalekites, and recovereth that reputation, the diminution whereof, had brought him into the perill of being stoned.

L 2

The

244 DAVID persecuted.

The Philistines fight with the Israelites, and have broken the body of their army, and slaine three of the Kings sonnes; the strength of the whole charged Saul, when he turning to his Armour-bearer, prays him to kill him, that he might not be a derision to the uncircumcised; which when he refused, Saul sets his owne sword against his breast, and falling on it, kills himselfe.

I Know not how the description of death to bee the utmost

DAVID persecuted. 245

most of all terrible things, should bee understood: If in this life the utmost of all delectable things be not to be had, why should the utmost of the terrible? One of the contraries cannot bee admitted, but the other must also bee granted. Now to live, not being the utmost of delectable things, teacheth that to dye is not the utmost of the terrible. The not finding in this our world any object that is the last of delectable and of terrible things (if we will not suppose the powers without an object) makes us beleeeve that it is in the other world, and in that other world is God scene and not scene. But he that described death the last of all terrible things, meant it of things in this world; which would be true, if spoken of the last in number, and not in weight: for otherwise, if it be such in it selfe, it must then be alway such unto all: And yet we read of many men that have imbraced it, to eschew some other thing, which wee must needs beleewe was more terrible to them. He that wonders at a resolution so extravagant as makes a man kill himselfe, may marvell at nature also, which being sometimes terrified at death doth prevent it.

246 DAVID persecuted.

The

DAVID persecuted. 247

The Armour-bearer of Saul, seeing what his Lord had done, drawes out likewise his sword, and kils himselfe. Some Writers are of opinion that this was Do-eg the Edomite, Sauls favourite; who lest hee should bee punished by his successor, killed himselfe.

THe favorites of a Prince that hath a successour, if they die not before Saul, yet they die often with Saul. I know not how to steere them from this rocke: there hath beene one, that seeing no other remedy, made at the soveraignty it selfe, and was just there de-L 4 stroyed.

248 DAVID persecuted.

stroyed. There hath beene also that turned his backe to the West, and fate his eyes toward the East, and towards those rayes that would have beene deadly to him, had not that Sun beene then under the line of the Horizon. As the sons of Princes cannot endure any companion in domination, no more will Princes in their love. He that thinkes there is no envie betwixt the father and the son, is deceived. The honours done to the sonne, if they increase that of the father, doe rejoyce him; but if they diminish his, they make him sorrowfull; which because it falls out but seldome, men suppose there is no such thing. When the favorite hath hope that by course of nature hee shall survive the
the

DAVID persecuted. 249

the Prince, it is a hard matter for him not to have an eye to the future; toward which if he cast a look, he loseth that which is present: but hee deserves no favour, that desires or thinkes to out-live his Lord. The greatest felicity that may befall the former, (it being not lawfull for any violently to charge upon death) would be to end his life just when the latter dieth. It is hard to die before him, because it is no easie thing to leave one that is his Patron, and his Love. He that blames Princes for having favorites, would have them inhumane and vile: What thing is a man that hath no love? or wherein may a Prince shew gracious unto others, or see himselfe his owne greatnes, but in advancing of others? and how or why should he advance them, if he doth not love them? Would they have him alwayes masked? would they not allow him any, to whom he may unstrip himselfe, and discover the secrets of his heart? He that will give to Princes (that which surely they ought to have) leave to descend sometimes from their throne of Majestie, and to conferre their inward cogitations with any one, hee must allow a favorite: If the Prince lay aside his Majestie, withall he would grow contemptible; if his secrets should bee imparted unto many, they could not bee secrets; but if he be familiar but to one, open but to one, hee is then the favorite. It is wished by them that are not beloved above the rest, that the Prince would would love all alike: but why should he love all alike, since he is not beloved himselfe of all alike? A well devoted subject ought to bee grieved that any one loveth his Lord more than he, and not that his Lord loves another more than himselfe. This would bee a desire to tyrannize over the affections of Princes, which men ought to reverence. He that could make his love more fervent, than that of the favorite, might peradventure make himselfe the greater favorite: but commonly men strive to unhorse him by malice, and not by vertue, because it is more easie to envy, than to love. Give me leave also further to affirme (if without offence I may) that it cannot be any blame to have a favorite, vorite, unless men will say that Christ our Lord was to be blamed, whose favorite was Saint John.

250. D A V I D persecuted.

DAVID persecuted. 251

252 DAVID persecuted.

One passing by chance neere unto Saul, who longed to die, and asked him whence he was; and the other answering that hee was an Amalekite: Saul prayeth him to kill him, which hee excuseth.

O The unspeakable providence of God! he peradventure permitted not Saul to kill himselfe, he consented that his sin should kill him. One of the Amalekites, whom against the will of God hee had saved alive, alive, God will have to put him to death. That sinner spoke for al sinners, & spake divinely, that said, My sin is alwayes against me. We have no enemies, but we make some: nor is Saul alone flaine by his sinne, for there be but few men that are not also killed by theirs. And it is very particular, that one particular should kill them; seeing it was the same that brought death into all the world: O how pleasant, and how profitable are the precepts of God! He is a Physician (under favour be it spoken) not onely for the soule, but for the body also. He hath left us better rules in a few leaves to preserve our health, than are contained in the great volumes of the bookes of the Gentiles.

DAVID persecuted. 253

King

254 DAVID persecuted.

King Saul dieth after he had reigned many yeeres, and with the King, dieth a great part of the people, which had demanded a King.

FAVOURS are not therefore demanded of God that he may doe them; but because he will doe them; hee doth them by meanes of our prayers: they are obtained with the Ooprative, not with the Imperative mood.
Hee that will command them, deserves then only to bee heard when it is to his harme; to have beene heard to teach him that is God, neither to bee taught, nor to be commanded. Wherefore then it was that Saul did lose his life, and wherefore
the

DAVID persecuted. 255

the Kingdome of Israel went out of his Progeny, is easily resolved by them, who omitting the manifold other causes, have recourse to that alone, which is the first, and chiefe, and prime cause : from whose well, all the rest proceed. But why God willeth the destruction of Kings and Kingdomes, would bee easie also to shew, were it not the will of God, is not alwayes effective, but sometimes also permissive : Hee wills that such as forsake him, lose their kingdomes ; and that they that follow him, obtaine them. Moreover, how and when it comes to passe that hee permit-teth sometimes those that follow him to be abased, and those that abandon him to bee exalted, I doe not know, and others

256 DAVID persecuted.

thers peradventure know as little. Those Princes then that are not in Gods favour, let them alwayes feare, how prosperous soever they are: Being not able to alledge any cause of their happinesse, they must needs be afraid; if they be great, they know not why they are so: and it is to be doubted that such greatnesse cannot long endure; whereof no cause can bee given for which it began. He who hapning to come into the house of a fortunate man, did suddenly depart thence, certainly hee meant it not of them that God maketh happy and successfull, but of those whom God permitteth so to be. The ruine of Saul came peradventure of his owne great prosperity, his being from a base estate exalted to a kingdome, confirmed and settled therein with happy successe, in stead of making him the more devout, made him more confident, yea, more rash and unadvised. Let us not make it lawfull to serve him the lesse, who hath prospered us to the end; wee should serve him the more, as if the gifts or graces which God vouchsafeth us were but for our pleasure, and not for his glory. A great sort of men offend their God in their prosperity, and pray unto him in their adversity; yet is hee still the same God, when he delivereth us out of misery and distresse, and when he overturneth our fortunate courses and proceedings. It may seeme peradventure, that to deliver out of disasters doth more manifest the

DAVID persecuted. 257

258 D A V I D persecuted.

the Divinity, than to abase prosperous fortunes; whence it is that men are more confident in his mercies, than fearfull of his vengeance. There is no man how wicked soever, but doth some good thing whereunto he afterward ascribes the cause of his good successe, and equivocating betweene the reward, and the grace given him, hath no feare of losing what he pretends to have deserved. On the contrary, there is no man so good, but he committeth some evill whereunto for the most part he attributeth the cause of his misfortune, and equivocating betweene Gods chastising and his exercising of him, sends up sometimes his supplications to God, when he should rather have sent thanksgivings; as if
the

DAVID persecuted. 259

the world which is the place of meriting and demeriting, were the place also of rewarding and punishing.

To conclude, let us pray his divine Majestie, that he will be alwayes pleased to end the persecutions of the Davids, with the death of the sauls: And all to the glory and honour of his great Name; in which I end this Booke, as I desire also to end my life.

FINIS.

The world which is the place of most misanthropic wars the place of the most terrible to conclude, let us pray his divine will that he will be always present to and the person of the world with the glory of the world. And all to the glory and honour of his great Name, in which I and all those as I
 and all those as I

21414

83 B 7/20
Part I

And the in the hand the gift of the gift : so they went their way , and the dog went after them .
 5 Now Anna late looking about towards the way for her son .
 6 And when she espied him coming , she laid to his father , Behold , thy son cometh , and the man that went with him .
 7 Then said Raphael , I know , Tobias , that thy father will open his eyes .
 8 Therefore mourned about his eyes with the gall , and being pickled therewith , he thrust it , and the whitewash shall fall away , and he shall see thee .
 9 Then Anna ran forth , and fell upon the neck of her son , and laid unto him , Seeing I am content to die , and they weep both .
 10 Tobias also went forth toward the door , and humbled : but his sonne ran unto him , 11 And took hold of his father , and he made of the gall on his fathers eyes , saying , Be of good hope , my father .
 12 And when his eyes began to smart , he rubbed them .
 13 And the whitewash pilled away from the corners of his eyes , and when he saw his sonne , he fell upon his neck .
 14 And he wept , and said , Blessed art thou , O God , and blessed is thy Name for ever , and blessed are all thy holy Angells : 15 For thou hast scourged , and basted me : yet on me : for behold , I see my son Tobias . And his sonne went in rejoicing .
 16 Then Tobias went out to meet his daughter in law at the gate of Nineve , rejoicing and greeting God : and they which were with him went in .
 17 But Tobias gave thanks to God : because he had recovered his sight .
 18 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 19 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 20 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 21 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 22 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 23 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 24 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 25 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 26 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 27 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 28 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 29 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 30 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 31 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 32 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 33 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 34 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 35 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 36 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 37 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 38 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 39 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 40 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 41 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 42 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 43 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 44 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 45 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 46 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 47 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 48 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 49 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 50 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 51 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 52 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 53 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 54 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 55 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 56 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 57 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 58 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 59 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 60 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 61 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 62 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 63 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 64 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 65 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 66 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 67 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 68 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 69 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 70 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 71 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 72 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 73 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 74 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 75 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 76 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 77 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 78 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 79 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 80 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 81 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 82 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 83 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 84 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 85 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 86 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 87 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 88 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 89 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 90 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 91 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 92 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 93 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 94 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 95 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 96 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 97 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 98 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 99 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .
 100 And Tobias gave thanks to God : because
 he had recovered his sight .

C H A P . XII .

And the old man said , It is due unto him .
 4 Then the old man said , It is due unto him .
 5 So he called the Angel , and he laid unto him , Take half of all that ye have brought , and go away in safety .
 6 Then he took them both apart , and laid unto them , Blessed God , praise him , and magnifie him , and praise him for the things which he hath done unto you in the right of all that I live . It is good to praise God , and exalt his Name , and honour his Name : do thou forth for God , that thou be not back to praise him .
 7 It is good to keep close the secretary of God : do that which is good , and no evil .
 8 Prayer is good with fasting , and righteousness : a little with almes , and righteousness : it is better to give almes , than to buy up gold .
 9 For almes doth deliver from death , and shall purge away all sin . Therefore exercise almes and righteousness , shall be Alled with life .
 10 But they that flatter , are counted their own life .
 11 Surely I will keep close nothing from you : for I said , It was good to keep close the secret of a King , but that it was honorable to reveal the works of God .
 12 Now therefore when thou didst pray and said thy daughter in law , I did bring the recompense of your prayers before the holy One : and when thou didst bury the dead , was with thee likewise .
 13 And when thou didst not delay to rise up , and leave thy dinner to go and cover the dead , thy good deed was not hid from me : but I was with thee .
 14 And now God hath sent me to heal thee , and thy daughter in law .
 15 I am Raphael , one of the seven holy Angels , which present the prayers of the Saints , and which go in and out before the glory of the holy One .
 16 Then they were both troubled , and fell upon their faces : for they feared .
 17 But he laid unto them , Fear not , for I shall go well with you : praise God therefore .
 18 For now I have known of mine , but by the will of our God I came : wherefore praise him for ever .
 19 All these dayes I did appear unto you , but I did neither eat nor drink with you , as now therefore give God thanks : for

And I shall instruct thee, and tell thee what thou art afraid: for the Highest will reveal many secret things unto thee. He hath seen that thy way is right: for that thou sorrowest continually for thy people, and makest great lamentation for Sion.

40 This therefore is the meaning of the vision which thou lately sawest.

41 Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou beganst to comfort her:

42 But now lest thou likest of the woman no more, but there appeared unto thee a city builded.

43 And whereas I told thee of the death of her house, this is the solution.

44 This woman whom thou sawest, is Sion: and whereas she said unto thee (even she whom thou seest as a city builded)

45 Whereas I say, she said unto thee, that she hath been thirty years barren:

46 But after thirty years, Solomon builded the city, and offered offerings: and then bare the barren a son.

47 And whereas I told thee, that she nourished him with labour: that was the dwelling in Jerusalem.

48 But whereas she said unto thee, that my son coming into his marriage chamber, happened to have a fall, and died, this was the destruction that came to Jerusalem.

49 And behold, thou sawest her likeness, and because she mourned for her sons, thou beganst to comfort her, and of these things which have transpired, these were to be opened unto thee.

50 For now the most High seeth that thou art grieved unreasonably, and I myself from thy whole heart for her, to hath he showed thee the benightedness of her glory, and the commendation of her beauty.

51 And therefore I bade thee remain in the field, where no house was builded.

52 For I knew that the Highest would keep this unto thee.

53 Therefore I commanded thee to go into the field, where no foundation of any building was.

54 For in the place wherein the Highest beginneth to show his clemency, there can no mans building be able to stand.

55 And therefore fear not, let not thine heart be afflicted, but go thy way in, and see the beauty and greatness of the building, as much as thine eyes be able to see:

56 And then shalt thou hear as much as thou ears may comprehend.

CHAPTER XI.

Then saw I a dream, and behold, there came up from the sea an Eagle which had twelve feathered wings, and three heads.

2 And I saw, and behold, the spread her wings over all the earth, and all the wide of the air flew on her, and were gathered together.

3 And I beheld, and out of her feathers there grew other contrary feathers, and they became like feathers, and small.

4 But her heads were as rest: the head in the midst was greater than the others, yet rested it with the residue.

5 Moreover, I beheld, and lo, the Eagle flew with her feathers, and reigned upon earth, and over them that dwell therein.

6 And I saw that all things under heaven were subject unto her, and no man spake against her, no not one creature upon earth.

7 And I beheld, and lo, the eagle rose upon her talons, and spake to her feathers, laying,

8 Watch ye all at once, stood every one in his own place, and watch by your the last.

9 But let the heads be perswaded, for the last.

10 And I beheld, and lo, the voice went not out of her heads, but from the midst of her body.

11 And I numbered her contrary feathers, and behold, there were eight and seven, and I looked, and behold, and lo, eight feathers arose one feather, and reigned over all the earth.

13 And so it was that the end of it came, and the appeared no more, for the stood up and reigned, and 14 And it happened, that of the end of it came, and first, so that it appeared no 15 Then came there a

NA 137/31

STC

17218

